PETER BONHAM of ALLEGHANY CO. PENN.

It has been reported that this Peter Bonham was a son of Amariah(4) who died in Washington Co. Penn. leaving a will naming as Executor "Peter Bonham of Alleghany Co. my trusty friend". If he was his son he would have called him son and not trusty friend. Records indicate they were neighbors in Maryland and no doubt came to Penn. either together or at about the same time. My conclusions on the Samuel line on page 57 gives Samuel (6) as presumed father of Elisha and Jesse and Also Samuel (7). Now I am sure that Peter was the father and that he was from the Samuel line as the legend in the Elisha and Jesse line of an ancestor being born in England and married a French lady indicated that Peter was from the Samuel line. There has been some argument about where the children were born, some saying Maryland and some saying Virginia. This family lived in the extreme northern tip of Va. so it is possible that some were born on one side of the line and some on the other. Peter owned some property in Md. so no doubt he lived there as well as in Va.

Rowland Ancestral Chart and others have it recorded that Malachia Death was the second wife of Malachiah Sr. Will of Hannah Death dated 10-10-1767 and probated 10-15-1778 shows her as widow of Malachiah Sr. with no children by him and indicates that Malachi Jr. was son of Malachiah Sr. and Mary Fox, so she must have been his second wife. This would make Malachi a half-brother of Absalom.

- P 56 CHARLES CYRUS ROBERTSON BONHAM a Mount City Ill. 5-17-1862
Co. E. 57th Ill. Inf.

- P 57 Third paragraph. SAMUEL BONHAM (5) married the French lady spoken of in the family legend, and had son SAMUEL(6) who had SAMUEL(7). SAMUEL (5) also had Catherine (6) Peter (5) who had Elisha--Jesse--Jacob--Louvallen--Ellenor--Philly--Susanna--Sarah--Christian-- and Rebecca. SAMUEL(5) also had Benjamin (6) and Eliza (6)

- P 58 After "up a piece" insert--close to and may have been over the Maryland state line. It has been reported that some of the family of Peter and his sons Elisha and Jesse were born in Maryland, though some of the family have been reported to have been born in Va.

- P 59 Statement by SAMUEL BONHAM of Sherman Texas. that his grandfather Samuel (7) was born in England has been proven to be incorrect. Samuel Bonham(6) received title to land in Loudoun Co. Va. before Samuel(7) was born and Samuel(6) had been settled there for several years.

RE: SAMUEL LEEPER

Original French name spelled Leirer. His father came over with the French and fought the British in the American Revolution.

According to the stories that came back from Texas "Sarah Leeper died when her children were small--Samuel went to fight in the Texas Revolution and decided to stay at its close--he wrote to the Romans to have his children sent to him, but they refused to send them to that "Indian infested country." He was given an honorable discharge and considerable land and stayed there but lost track of his children and they didn't know that he had sent money to have them sent to him, until after their grandparents had died."

RE: SCOTT

JAMES SCOTT was born in Ireland 8-17-1817. He married about 1770 and came to America in 1771, when he proved his title for himself and his wife Rachel ( whose mother was a Holmes and related to Oliver Wendell Holmes) who was of nobility in Scotland and her parents were displeased with her marriage. She was born 4-3-1715 and died 3-12-1830.

James Scott's will was probated in Little Co. Mo. in 1817 naming his wife Rachel, and Robert, Joseph b 2-1-1772 son; Ann Calahan.

COMMENTS ON MATERIAL BY W.A. BONHAM

By E.A.Hazle

This William A. Bonham whom I have met personally and discussed the Bonham genealogy did a great deal of research about 1930 but at that time travel conditions were not as favorable as at the present.

The military record in the DC. Ill book is his work and to gather it together from the military records at Washington took him many weeks.

This is a very fine record and I am glad it was available.

On page 110 under Martin, Benjamin, he deals with the Benjamin Martin will and has used the incorrect records of the A.J. Archives, mentioned elsewhere in the BONHAM book, and said the grandchildren were Benjamin and Nehemiah. THIS IS NOT CORRECT The names were Benjamin and Hezekiah.

On the same page he states as others have that Hezekiah Bonham was one of the organizers of the Seventh Day Baptist Church, and though he is reported to have been partially responsible for the Church he had moved away from Piscataway before the church was organized. I have a copy of the record of the early members, supplied to me by the church which is at nearby Newmarket, (originally called Quibbletown) and Hezekiah (3) Bonham was never a member of the Seventh Day Baptist Church.

On the same page 110 he states under Nehemiah Bonham that his line of descent is by the first wife Ann Stout, which is not correct, as his line is by the second wife Elizabeth Martin.

On page 110 under Benjamin Bonham he has it that he married Oney. Elsewhere in the BONHAM book I have used the name with Phoebe which is known to be correct, and called Oney, due mostly to the appearance of the Oney in the later line. Also he states that Benjamin Sr. died by 1807 while later records show that he died in 1810 in Va.

The full maiden name of Benjamin's wife is still unknown. He calls Oney Bonham in the 1819 census the widow of Benjamin Sr. and the census records show she had two females 16 to 26 with her. Benjamin did not have any girls in that age bracket.

It has been suggested and I think it very logical that this Oney Bonham was really Rachel Bonham widow of Joseph Bonham who died in 1803.

Very possibly she was known as Ovi and the census taker may have taken it for Oney and so recorded it. Also Sarah and Mercy grandchildren of Joseph are known to have been living with her after Joseph's death.

My conclusion now is that Benjamin's wife was Phoebe but not Oney.

On page 111 he deals with the confusion regarding the Nehemiah's in the Wythe County area and true enough there were three of them there.

There was Nehemiah who married Isabelle Scott and Nehemiah who married Betsy Williams. Then there was Nehemiah of nearby Giles and Tazewell Counties who was a traveling minister and performed marriages of record in Wytheville, but lived in Tazewell co. His diary shows he reached his son John's house in a days travel by horse and John lived in Wythe Co. On page 111 he shows a Nehemiah Bonham to have married a Smith. I HAVE NEVER FOUND ANY SUCH RECORD.

The Nehemiah the minister who married Rachel Karr later moved to No. Carolina and the BONHAM book has a quite complete record of this line under NEHEMIAH--RACHEL KARR BONHAM LINE.

This comment is not a criticism of W.A. Bonham but rather corrections that have been found in the past number of years research. E.S.H.

WILLIAM BONHAM

The story of William owning property in Indiana is correct but it fails to tell a tragic story connected with it.

William Bonham had land in Indiana and as I get the story he over expanded and became financially involved and was about to lose his holdings. He called on his brother David Sr. who was doing quite well at the time and pleaded with him to raise money to save his, William's, properties. With the promise that he would clear up his financial matters and then sell out and repay David, he, David against the wishes of his wife and advice of friends, placed a mortgage on his farm and let William have the money. William did clear up things so he could sell which he did and then picked up quietly and moved to Kansas.

It is reported that he paid cash for the land he purchased in Kansas and then stocked it for cash which was very unusual in those days.

When David's note became due he begged William by mail to pay back the money he had borrowed but William never replied. David as a last resort made a trip to Kansas and going to the farm was met at the door by Elizabeth, William's wife and told that William was away and she did not know when he would be back. She would not let David come in and wait and finally ordered him to leave and when he hesitated she threatened to throw hot water in his face. David was sure William was on the place and it later proved he was correct, but it was evident he had no intention of paying back the borrowed money. Having no other resources it followed that David lost his farm and died broke.

This information is not generally known in the family and William's prosperity was supposed to have come from successful operations in Ind.

The place of birth of Elisha and Jesse Bonham has been a much discussed matter and I am now sure I have the answer.
 Some descendants say that Elisha and Jesse were born in Virginia and others have said they were born in Maryland.
 Having visited the area it is easy to understand how one could be honestly mistaken.

Summit Point Va. near where the Bonhams squatted on Lord Fairfax land is in the upper point of Va. close to the Md. line.
 There is no question that the land squatted on is in Va. as the deed from Leonard Ezline, representative of Lord Fairfax, is recorded in Loudoun Co. Va. And that is where Samuel (5) and Samuel(6) lived.

However Peter(6) evidently settled a short distance away and was

A Bonham in Minn. says he descends from Richard Bonham of Ill. who was born in Maryland. Richard born 1810, son of Jesse is the one mentioned, so Peter may have remained there until about the time they all moved to Licking Co. Ohio. Court records indicate that Jesse was in Wheeling, now W.Va. in 1811, so they may have stopped in Western Penn. for a few years. Peter moved to Alleghany Co. Penn. about 1800, and Elisha and Jesse may not have come west for about 10 years.

P 251 Delote BENJAMIN RUGLESS BONHAM FAMILY RECORD P 251-252.

Use corrected record following

BENJAMIN RUGLESS BONHAM b Ky. 10-1-1924 d 10-16-1912 Nebr.

His parents are not known at this time Jan. 1952.

He had a brother James who lived in Nebr. died, no children

He insisted on being called Bonham which proves he was from the southern branch of the Bonham, the Abolom line.

They are the only branch who pronounced the name Bonham as far as I know. He could have been a son of William Bonham, son of Malachi Bonham who was in St. Clair Co. Ill. in the 1820 census and only his son Daniel was at home at that time.

There was a Tennessee Bonham who also called himself Bonham and could have been a brother of Ben. S. and both sons of William who was a son of Malachi (C).

If correct this line is Benjamin Rugless (5) William (7) Malachi (6) Abolom (5) Malachiah (4) Malach (3) Nicholas (2) George Bonham (1). George and Nicholas came from Eng. 1835.

Wonder who he might be. Think error as to birthplace as no record of any Bonhams in Ohio in 1798. Maybe he was born in Va. same as his wife, and was a son of Elisha Bonham, but would have been a twin brother of Peter who was also born in 1798. May have been b in 1797.

There has been some confusion as to Rebecca Wiley's middle name. The cemetery record shows ALEXANDER which I took to be ALEXANDRIA. However her name may have been ALEXANDER, the name of a friend who went hand for her marriage.

P 273

WILLIAM b 8-7-1802 d 1845 ? may have married (1) EUCLIDA FILL and had Robert and 1872. However there were two ALEXANDER's in Washington Co.

This record of the CANADIAN BONHAMS has only been made possible by the splendid co-operation of the Bonhams now living in Canada, and the help of the Canada Public Archives.

A very great deal of this data was supplied by Jack Leach-Porter, the husband of Ora Bonham of the George Wesley Bonham family. Herbert German, of St. George, who is in his 90's and knew many of the older Bonhams, has some old maps that have been of great help in getting this data together, and has been a wonderful correspondent.

Mrs. Mary (Jide) Bonham of Higate, Lester Wilton of Delburne, John Wilford Bonham, deceased 1960, of Alia, Alberta, and others too numerous to mention have been wonderful correspondents, and I am most grateful.

From PUBLIC ARCHIVES OF CANADA Re: Malachuk Bonham

The reference mentioned to Mr. Hazle were the muster rolls of the 1st. Battalion, New Jersey Volunteers (a Loyalist Regiment). Bonham served in a company commanded by Capt. Richard Gayford. Gayford was succeeded by Capt. James Keaton who, in turn, was succeeded by Capt. Samuel Leonard. This company was stationed at Staten Island until Mar. 1783 when it was transferred to New Town, Long Island.

Bonham's name was found on the rolls from Dec., 1777 to 24, Aug. 1783. From the first muster roll found (Dec. 1777), it was learned that Pte. Bonham was 22 years old, 5 feet 6 inches in height, had been born in Cumberland Co. and had enlisted from there 18, Dec. 1777.

In the roll dated 9, Sept. 1779 it was noted that Bonham was absent by leave, on Long Island. In roll dated 3, Nov. 1779 Bonham was on duty with Lt. Taylor. The March roll 1780 shows that he was "on command with Commander in Chief", and in the rolls from 13, May, 1780 to 9 Feb. 1781, Bonham was "on command with Lieut.-Col. Ferguson". In the rolls from 25 July, 1781 to 13 Feb. 1782, Bonham was shown as being "with Southern Army". No evidence was found of his having fled to Canada or of his service with the Revolutionary Army.

P 344 This man was discharged at Sighy, Aug. 27, 1784, and is reported to have settled there. No record of any descendants.

MUSTER ROLL OF DISABLED OFFICERS AND DISBANDED SOLDIERS AND LOYALISTS MUSTERED OUT at Sighy, Aug. 27, 1784.

New York Gen. Slog. Record 34-118.

There is a legend in the Zachariah Bonham family line that Malachi later joined the Revolutionary forces and served with distinction, but I have never found record to that effect. It is possible that some have confused Malachi, Lt. Maryland Troops as being this same Malachi.

The Malachi with the Maryland Troops was a half-brother of Absalom Bonham who was on the staff of Gen. George Washington.

TENNESSEE BONHAM FAMILY

by E.B. Hazie

TENNESSEE BONHAM ( b ? d Shelby Co. Ill. ca 1861

Mar; BOLIN ( in Mo.) The Mar; (2) St Carney.

( The parents not known, however I have reason to believe that he was a son of William Bonham who was a son of Malachi Bonham of St. Clair Co. Ill. in the 1820 census. Malachi had sons Samuel, William and Daniel and possibly other children. Samuel died ca 1827 and in spring court of 1828 William was appointed guardian of Samuel's children, Nelson, Nancy, Elizabeth and Jane. We have never found the names of William's own children. Possibly Tennessee's true name was Nelson. It is reported the family at one time pronounced the name as Boncham and the southern branch of the family is the only branch that pronounced it that way. Malachi was a son of Absalom who settled in the south, and ancestor of what we call the southern Bonhams. The name Simson appears in Tennessee Bonham family and that name was in the southern branch of the family. It is reported that Enoch son of Tennessee was born in Ill. If Tennessee was a son of William then the line would be as follows. George Bonham (1) Nicholas (2) Hazzkiah (3) Malachi (4) Absalom (5) Malachi (6) William ? (7) Tennessee (8) Enoch (9) Ben Franklin (10)

CIVIL WAR RECORD OF DAVID BONHAM, (WRIGHT) (New England) GREENE CO.
INDIANA, WRIGHT TASP. ALSO A SKETCH OF HIS POLITICAL VIEWS
By his son WILLIAM ALEXANDER BONHAM, and notes by his daughter MARY BONHAM WHITSON, added later.

My Father David Bonham, was public spirited and conscientious in all public affairs and perhaps inherited his Anti-Slavery principles from his father David Bonham Sr. who was born and raised in Virginia, he being poor was made to feel the power of a certain class of domineering slave holders, and he and he and his brothers, Nehemiah and Smith, decided to seek a home in Ohio, which had recently been admitted as a free State.

Father cast his first ballot for Henry Clay, the Standard Bearer of the Whig Party in 1844, and again in 1848 for Zachary Taylor, who was elected President.

In 1852 he voted for Winfield Scott, the Whig Candidate. When the Republican Party was organized in 1856, he voted for John C. Fremont, the candidate of that party.

In 1860 he voted for Abraham Lincoln, the Civil War President, who proved to be the one man, who could successfully lead the Union, to safe harbor, which still stands in all its greatness, and united as a people.

His Civil War Record was related to William Alexander Bonham, by himself. When the War broke out in 1861, he volunteered in Company F, 31st, Reg. Indiana Volunteers; was mustered in at Camp View, Terre Haute, Indiana, Sept. 5th, 1861.

After spending a month in drilling and receiving their equipment, they were ordered to the front Oct. 5th, 1861; passed through Paducah, Ky. and arrived at Camp Calhoun, on Greene River, Ky. Nov. 1st. and spent the winter there in drilling.

Feb. 9th, 1862 they broke camp, and embarked on a boat for Ft. Donaldson. After boarding the boat they were ordered to disembark and take another boat.

At this point Father thought of an article that he had left in Camp in his hurry, on breaking camp, and thought he would have time to run back and get it before the Regiment would be ready to move, but to his dismay, when he returned, the Regiment had been ordered back on the boat and had just left without any signal, and had started on its way down Greene River headed for Ft. Henry and Donaldson.

Thus he was left behind and while waiting for another boat, a Captain detailed him as a guard on his boat, which was on its way up Green River and Barren River to Bowling Green, Ky.

The Boat with another boat was used as a Pontoon Bridge over Barren River, for Buels Army Cross, on its way to Ft. Donaldson; the Army was two days in crossing, and the soldiers were fatigued and sleepy, one soldier dropped his gun in the river, as he was walking the gang plank.

After the Army had , Father went down to the edge of the water and with a long plank with nails driven in on one end, so as to form a hook, he drew the gun out of the water and took it up to camp and dried it and stacked it with the other guns.

While here he found an old nursery, and being passionately fond of fruit of all kinds, ( this old nursery had been abandoned, and it was being trampled under foot by soldiers), he took his bayonet and dug up a few small fruit trees, and some evergreens, and picked a few relics, among which was an oil whetstone; these he packed in a box and sent them home.

The whetstone is now in my possession ( W.A.B. ) also the gun. The box was so long; on the road that none of the trees grew. He had some difficulty in getting the gun home it could not be sent by Express, but when the boat was ready to start on its return trip, from Barren and Green rivers, he took the gun along with him, on the way he met a soldier who was going through to Evansville, Ind. so Father got him to take the gun and leave it with an old friend by the name of Henry Stewart, who was a mill known business man in Evansville. After the war was over Father went down to Evansville on business and brought the gun home with some other goods.

It was Father's custom to make an annual trip down to the Ohio River and buy supplies for his own household, and others of the neighbors.

I have heard him tell of the hardships of the long trip on horseback, and what he saw on the way, and the dangers.

While acting Guard on this pontoon boats (which caused him to be absent from his Regiment) which formed a bridge across the Warren River, at Bowling Green, Ky., Fort Donaldson had been captured in his absence, his Regiment had participated in the battle, with little or no loss.

From this juncture, everything-boats, soldiers, supplies, ammunition was ordered to Pittsburg Landing, and the boat on which he was guarding, went down Barron River to its junction with the Greene River, thence to the Ohio River, landing at Evansville on the way, to the mouth of the Tennessee River, up that River to Pittsburg Landing, on the way up Father overtook his own Regiment, on another boat.

He had been absent from his Regiment from Feb. 9th, 1861 to March 15th of the same year, and was heartily cheered by his comrades, as he boarded the boat on which they were, and related his story of being detailed as a guard on a boat that had been used to form a pontoon bridge for Buell's Army to cross Barron River on his way to Ft. Donaldson.

They arrived on the boat "Fanny Bullitt," March 16th, 1862 at Pittsburg Landing, and went to camp, and were put in the 3rd Brigade, 4th Division.

The Brigade was composed of the 31st and 44th Indiana; 17th and 25th Ky. J.C. Larnach (?) Brigadier Commander; Col. Swift Colonel, and John T. Smith, Captain of Co. F. 31st. Indiana Vol.

Sunday morning Apr. 6th at 7 o'clock, they were surprised and attacked by Beauregard's Army, some of the men were eating breakfast.

General Grant the Commander, was at breakfast 20 miles away at Savannah, Tenn. (In later years we had the good fortune to visit Shiloh Memorial National Park, and all its historical spots found there, also saw Grant's Headquarters at Savannah, and drank out of the same well that was in use at that time and from which the General drank. Mary Bonham Whitson)

The Confederates had marched from Corinth, Miss., a distance of about 20 miles during the night, and began the attack in force at once.

This was the first war experience of most of Grant's troops, and many of them were panic stricken, and ran and hid behind the bluff.

Some whole Regiments of Ohio troops were among them, and could not become induced to come out and fight, to save the day.

However the more brave soldiers loaded themselves with ammunition and went on the firing line and kept the enemy in check, until Grant's arrival, when the army was gotten in fighting shape.

Father said he filled his cartridge box full of cartridges and pockets full, making in all about 80 rounds, and that by 2 o'clock he had used them all up.

He said the firing line was so scattered that the smoke of the guns did not interfere with taking aim, and that every time he fired he drew a bead on some one of the enemy. He noticed one of them lying behind a stump, and that this man stuck his head out every once in a while and fired at our men. Father watched him for a while, and when this man got his head out far enough to get a bead on him, he fired, and that was the last he heard of him, and saw him only after the battle was over, when he visited that stump and saw there a Confederate soldier with a bullet hole in his head lying by this stump, and without a doubt was the same one who had been picking off our own comrades.

By this time we were getting short of ammunition, and the guns were getting foul and dirty.

At the same time Father got a ball lodged in the muzzle of his gun and could not force it down with his hands as he lay on the ground, up on the brow of a hill, so he ran back down the hill to some trees and thought he could place the end of the barrel against the tree and drive the ball down, but even this failed to force the ball down, (not discouraged) he saw lying near by a dead soldier with his gun beside him, he threw his own gun down and took up that of the dead soldier and also some cartridges from his cartridge box, he ran a cartridge down this gun and water came out of the tube, this rendering it unfit for service.

He threw it down and picked up his own gun, always being of a resourceful nature, he tried shaking powder down the breach, put a cap on, held the gun above his head and fired it, and the lodged ball went out clear, without injury to the gun, then he proceeded to load his gun, using the cartridges from the dead soldier's box. He used two of them by pouring the powder down first, and two balls on top of it. His gun was of large caliber, a Belgian rifle, the other was a Minnie rifle.

After several minutes delay in getting his gun unchoked, he made ready to go back to his position on the firing line, but to his surprise his Regiment had been ordered to retreat, and they were running up the hill on the other side of the hollow.

The enemy had made a successful charge on their position and were coming double quick over the hill after them, he lost no time in following his Regiment, but was some distance behind them.

As he was running up the hill he thought to himself, "I will not go into camp with a loaded gun" and as he was passing a tree, he turned around behind it, and looking back, he saw a number of Confederate Officers on horseback collected together, they were cheering and shaking hands and waving their hats, rejoicing over the success of their charge and supposed victory. He fired at the bunch and started again up the hill on the run, his shot had the effect to disperse the squad instantly, and they went back to their charges on a gallop.

The next instant, what he thought to be a platoon of the enemy fired at him as he ran up the hill, they undershot him, however, he could feel the dirt strike him on the back, as their shells plowed their way after him. One shell came up even to his elbow, and sank into the earth ahead of him, one shot away about two inches of the hem on the bottom of his pants.

It was his supposition that he had hit and wounded some of those officers and that they had ordered a company to fire on him, thinking they would cut him to pieces. He had continued on his way to camp and he passed a battery that had been abandoned by the Union soldiers, except a boy who was loading a cannon by himself, and just as Father passed the boy shot the cannon at the advancing enemy, then they ran together and overtook their Regiments, which had halted and were trying to form a line so as to march into camp in order, but the enemy was too close on to them.

The Colonel had difficulty getting his men to dress up, they would keep looking back, and while thus engaged one of the men was shot in the leg.

Father turned to the Colonel and said "If you will turn around and go shooting at the enemy I will stay here as long as any one, but I am not going to stay here and be shot down for nothing."

Father then threw his gun on his shoulder and walked off into camp, he had left one of his comrades sick in his tent in the morning and was expecting to take him away to a place of safety, but he had been removed back toward the river under cover of the gun boats and other batteries.

A shell had fallen in his tent and had done considerable damage, by destroying some of their provisions. For some unknown cause the Confederates failed to follow up the retreating Union soldiers, but rather retired.

It was the opinion of many who were on the ground that day that it would have been comparatively easy task for them to have captured General Grant's entire army. Most of the men were expecting to be taken prisoners and were making preparations for it.

This lull in the battle gave General Grant an opportunity to rally his men and place his batteries in position for defense, thus he kept the enemy at bay until Buell arrived with reinforced units. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Father's Brigade was ordered out to attack a force of Confederates who had taken a position not far from the camp.

While making a charge on them they ran up on a high battery which opened up on them with grape and canister, they were in danger of being cut to pieces, but they made a hearty retreat down the hill, thus the enemy overshot them. Being a timbered tract of land, their bullets cut down trees and limbs on their heads, and a number of our men were hurt by the falling limbs and timber.

At the bottom of the hill was a ditch which required quite a leap to cross, and making the leap Father sprained one of his ankles, which had been weakened by being thrown out of place some years before, he was thus unable to keep up with his Regiment, and had to fall off to one side to prevent falling into the hands of the enemy. His course took him into a swamp, the water not being deep, he was able to pick his way along. The water seemed to strengthen the lame ankle and gave him some relief.

Once in the swamp he had nothing to guide him except the sound of the firing, which seemed to be a running fight, he had to keep far enough out to avoid being seen by the enemy. He traveled along in the direction of the firing for quite a while, when he stopped beside a tree to rest, and take observation. While waiting, he saw a Confederate soldier at trail turn toward him. He was traveling at an angle to and seemed to have his attention turned toward a hill on the opposite of the swamp.

As Father had seen a company of Union Officers on this hill a while before, they were taking a view of the battle from this position, he concluded this man was a "sharpshooter" and was trying to get a shot at these Officers, he allowed him to come within good shooting distance before making any attempt to shoot him. He knew he would have to take care of his aim, if he should have to shoot, as sharpshooters are not supposed to give any quarter, when he was in good position, and nothing to dodge behind he drew up his gun and took aim, at the same time calling him to halt.

The man dropped his gun as if he had been shot and threw up his hands and called to Father "For God's sake, do not shoot."

All this time he had not discovered Father, and this man must have thought Father also a sharpshooter on the other side, and did not expect to receive any quarters from him.

Father then called to him to come to him, which he obeyed, and started without his gun, he told him to bring his gun along, he picked it up and carried it just foremost, and gave it to Father, who in the meantime slipped his bayonet on his gun. He next asked him if he had any side arms. The man said "no". He asked if his gun was loaded, he replied "yes".

Father then searched him and examined his gun, to be sure and found his gun loaded as he said. He said arm.

His gun was just like Father's, a Belgian Rifle. The next problem was to how to get his prisoner into camp safely. He did not wish to let him know that he was lame, as he thought the man might try to make advantage of it and make him trouble. He did not want to have to kill him, if he could help it. So he took a gun in each hand and told his prisoner to march on a little ahead of him, and would tell him the direction to go. By this time Father had reached and he saw the battle was over and the enemy had retired. He also had to keep well out of sight to avoid falling into the hands of the enemy.

As he walked along single file, his prisoner became dependent and to Father "I wish you had shot me", but he said he feared he would be taken as a prisoner, and he was distressed and not taken care of. Father told him he "need not worry about that," as he would be better taken care of as a prisoner on the Union side, than he would be in his own Regiment. This seemed to encourage him and he talked more freely.

He belonged to the 1st Louisiana Regiment.

It was now getting late in the evening and when he thought he was safely beyond the enemy he turned into the main traveled road, and came onto an Illinois Regiment, they had gone into camp and were getting supper. As he came into camp lying behind a Confederate soldier as a prisoner, the Regiment broke into a cheer.

He then called for rum for himself and prisoner, which they ate heartily. They had coffee and the man said that was the first he had drunk since he had been out. After he had turned his prisoner to the Officers of the Regiment. As they parted he looked at Father wistfully as if to say "I am losing a better friend than I will find when in prison".

Father then sought out his own Regiment, and thus ended his first days work of hard fighting which was Sunday, April 6th, 1862, during the day he received a slight wound, a bullet cut between his lips or rather across the upper lip which bled profusely. (This was very noticeable in after years, as where the wound was (it had played its way clear across the lip,) the beard did not grow there, but his mustache was heavy enough to drop over and hide the wound. Mary Boston Whitson.)

April 7th, the 2nd day of the battle at Pittsburg Landing, the battle was resumed, but Father's ankle was so swollen and sore that he could not walk on it, so he had to remain in camp.

Grant's Army was reinforced by Sherman's during the night and when the battle commenced there was more regularity in the firing, and after a few hours of fighting the Confederates were driven off the field and retreated toward Corinth, Miss., thus ended one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War, and the Confederates received a death blow from which they never fully recovered.

Quoting their President Davis: "He said of the death of General Albert Sidney Smith, that they had lost their best General, who was wounded about 2 o'clock on Sunday and died to death shortly afterward.

He was shot in the thigh while he was being congratulated by his Staff Officers on the success of the charge he made on the Union position at a place called "The Hornets Nest" (where the hottest fight of the 2 days battle had been fought. Mary Boston Whitson.)

Father borrowed a horse the next day and rode over the battlefield.

The sight was awful. In some places the dead laid so close together that he could have walked several hundred yards on dead bodies.

One place known as the "Bloody Pond", the water in it looked like pure blood, occasioned partly by the wounded soldiers dragging themselves there to get a drink to slack their thirst, and to wash their wounds, and many were shot down at this point. (I have stood beside this pond and felt like I was treading on holy ground. Mary Boston Whitson.)

The small bushes in front of some of the positions were cut down by the bullets as if mowed by a scythe.

Father's Regiment remained on the field until May 2nd, then they marched on to Corinth, Miss., which was being besieged by the Union Army.

About this time Father was taken with the fever, and was removed to a hospital where he soon recovered. After his recovery he was detailed on a horse and remained there for some time. May 30th they moved into Corinth.

Evacuated June 1st and arrived Iuka, Miss. on 11th, and from there they were sent to West Point, Tenn.

June 21st arrived at Tusculuma, Tenn.

June 23rd marched to Florence, Alabama.

July 1st arrived at Athens, Ala. The 4th of July was celebrated at this place by a Brass Parade in the Fair Grounds. Not a white person from this town honored us (?) by their presence, but the colored people came in numbers and cheered the old flag.

July 15th, 1862 we reached Reynolds Station, here on the 21st, first Lieut. William Thompson died. (Lt. Thompson was an old neighbor of Father's, living south of his place about 1 mile. His widow, Malinda Thompson and her five daughters and one son, William Taylor Thompson lived there for years after the war. Mary Bonham Wilson.)

Father nursed him in his sickness, and assisted in preparing his body for shipment home to Indiana. 25th of July we took cars for Nashville Tenn.

29th of July went to Gallatin, Tenn. Aug. 1st we left Gallatin by rail through Nashville, Tenn. to Murphysborough, remained there until Sept. 3rd 1862, when we began a long march to Louisville, Ky. to make connections with Buell's Main Army. Passing through the cities of Nashville, Bowling Green, and Elizabethtown, Ky. On the march to Louisville, Corporal Jacob Miller Larr took sick and we left him in the Hospital at Nashville, Tenn, where he died Oct. 5th, 1862, and was buried in the National Cemetery there.

He was my uncle and my mother's (Miss Miller Larr Bonham) brother.

He left a widow Mary Jane Larr, one daughter, Hester Gann Lotsinger, and two sons Bartlett and Gayland Larr. (M.B.L.)

On the 20th of Sept. we came upon the rear of Bragg's Army (Confederate) but we out generalized him and got away, on the 25th marched into Louisville Ky., and camped on the banks of the Ohio River. Here in a hotel, Gen. Jeff. C. Davis shot and killed the Division Commander, William Nelson.

They had a quarrel and Nelson slapped Davis in the mouth. Father was near at the time, and heard the shot that killed Nelson.

We left Louisville Oct. 10th. Arrived at Knoxville, Ky., about midnight of the 12th. We found the people kind and sociable. They brought us provisions and invited us to their homes. We left Knoxville the 16th passed through Crab Orchard, and Mt. Vernon on the 18th, on then to Nelsons Cross Roads; here we encountered the Confederates and had a skirmish with them and captured a few prisoners.

Oct. 19th Co. F. (Father's Co.) was sent out to scout and brought in 15 mules, 29 head of beef cattle and 30 Confederates (who were guarding them) as prisoners.

On Oct. 22 we marched on to Goose Creek and destroyed the salt works there, in Clay Co. Ky.

The 25th marched back to Nelsons Cross Roads and the night following we encountered a snow storm, and many of the men had left their blankets behind, and consequently suffered severely with the cold.

From here we marched to Columbia arriving on the 29th. Nov. 4th arrived at Moscow, and on the 5th passed Brass Parade, the first for two months. On the 7th we broke camp and marched to Scottville, arrived the 8th. On the 10th passed through Gallatin, Tenn., to the Cumberland River. The next day we crossed the River and marched to Silver Springs, Williamson Co. Tenn. and remained there until the 19th, when we resumed the march, passed the "Hermitage" Andrew Jackson's Plantation and marched on across Stone River, and finally pitched tent near Nashville, Tenn. where we remained until Dec. 25, 1862. (I heard Father relate many experiences of this long march. He said many times the soldiers and himself would be so worn and tired that they would drop down anywhere they could find any degree of rest, and sleep so sound that they would not know that it had rained, until they awoke in the morning, and water would be standing where they lay, thereby causing much sickness.

His feet would be swollen and stiff.

Father was a religious character, and at all many times some or any of the men would employ their time playing cards, and swearing and carousing generally, and that often times he would slip behind some bushes and read his Bible, and pray, or write letters home to his family and friends. I have one he wrote to his church, a copy of which is attached. (P. 2, 3.)

Father was discharged from the Army Nov. 18, 1862 for disabilities (which prevented him from entering again). Organic affection of the heart and rheumatism. Then he had never fully recovered from (and never did) the lameness caused by spraining his ankle during the battle of Pittsburg Landing.

(One very striking coincidence was that he was discharged Nov. 18th 1862 and just 27 years later-Nov. 18, 1891, the Heavenly Father He so dearly loved, took him to his heavenly home, thus discharged from the earthly pains and promoted to the ranks above. Mary Bonham Whitson.)

Father returned home in Feb. having been out 18 months. He enlisted as a private, and could have been promoted, especially after the battle of Shiloh, there being several vacancies among the Cole Officers.

(I hear Father say there was quite a bit of jealousy among the men as to promotions, his Captain came to him one day and told him that promotion was due to him, but that some others were making demands of him and were going to feel very much incensed should they not receive promotion, and asked Father what he should do. (The Captain was a personal friend of Father's) and Father told him to go ahead, that he would not care, so the matter was peacefully adjusted by Father waiving his rights, thereby losing promotion. (This showed the bigness of Father's manhood.)

He preferred carrying a gun too wearing "Shoulder Straps" that he could serve his country better down in the ranks, where he could use his rifle with deadly effect when required.

He was one of the best marksmen in his Regiment. I will relate an incident to show what his comrades thought of his marksmanship.

A detachment of soldiers of his company was sent out to guard a foraging expedition, to get some corn out of the country at a farm house and while the wagons being loaded, pickets were sent out in different directions, for fear the enemy might be hiding in the woods, and make a raid on them while loading the corn. Father was sent out in the direction of a field, when he got to the fence, he discovered some men and on the ground he saw where they had bit off the paper wrappings from their cartridges preparatory to loading their guns. From this indication he felt sure the enemy was not far off. He slipped down the fence and kept a close watch on them. He heard a gun fire down in the hollow, and he supposed that they had fired at the men at the house. He crept along in the direction of the shot, keeping behind a large log that lay between them. After a little the pickets were called in, as the wagons had completed their loading. When he returned he related what he saw, and inquired if any one had shot at them, and one of the company spoke up and said he had shot at a squirrel, this man in some way had gotten hold of a fine hat, formerly worn by a confederate soldier, and was wearing it instead of the regulation cap of the Union Soldiers.

Father told him he was a fool, if he had got right up, his head right over the log, Father would have shot him sure, then the man got mad at the Captain in charge of the train for not telling him he had pickets out.

The man was scared as well as Father at the escape (Father being a sure shot) it would have caused him deep concern all his life had he shot the man (which would have been inevitable had there not been a living God interposed. Mary Bonham Whitson.)

Shortly after Father came home from the army, there was an election held at the Cross Roads, near his home. The election was dominated by a strong rebel element, fully of one I say, and they took it on themselves to hinder the Union men from voting, or as near as they could intimidate. Father had gone home to get something to eat, and when the riot started at the voting place, and Father heard the noise, took out his faithful old army gun and ran as fast as he could, arriving in time to see some of his friends and relatives being scourged all the round, by sympathizers. All not disabled men were at the poll. Some of these men took advantage of this to beat up those too old, too young or too disabled to be in the army, to carry this election.

My Mother and aged Father, David Larr, and her younger brother George Larr were beaten to insensibility, and another old laborer by the name of Dyserta, a quite frail old man, beat an eye. A poor grandfather lived long afterward, this without a doubt hastening their deaths.

Father walked all around these and among the rebels, for they were known and feared them to touch him or any of his friends again, but they only tried one scheme. Some one hollered to Father to "watch out" and he turned around in time to see one of them about to strike him with his back turned and then ran. Father's friends begged him not to follow as several were not able to help him. These fellows were too yellow to go to war. Father for years had his home well guarded by steel rods sunk in the floor, but no one ever came.

REMEMBRANCES OF THE LIFE OF DAVID BONHAM, SON OF DAVID AND TACY PHILLIPS BONHAM.

By Mary Bonham
Whitson.

His Father David Bonham Jr. was born in Virginia in 1773-4.
His Parents ..... more later. ( Benjamin and Phoebe Bonham, W.B.H.)
Married to Tacy Phillips in Virginia 1803 ( error 5-13 1804 E.B.H.)
Tacy Phillips born in Va. 1783. Parents - Anna and ?
There were born to David and Tacy Bonham, 11 children of whom David Jr. was the 3th child.

David Bonham Jr. was born in Harrison Co. O. 5-15-1823
Married Eliza Miller Larr, in Ind. 11-17-1845
Died in Wright ( now Millers) Ind. Greene Co. 11-15-1891, after a very serious accident. ( more later.)

David while quite young lad, undertook to aid his father in the care of his large family, by doing work of which he was capable. His father being in greatly reduced circumstances.

In one instance he was employed by a man who lived at some distance from his Father's home, to chop wood, which they used almost entirely for heating at that time.

The man sent him out to the wood lot to cut wood, and one day, his axe slipped and almost covered the toe next to his big toe, and being very anxious to get money to take home to his father, he did not tell of the accident, but wrapped it up in a piece of cloth, and worked on for several days and then he went home they discovered that his toe had grown fast under the other toe ( this was on his left foot) and carried the marks of it to his grave.

He was always laborious and willing to work, and because of this merit his education was neglected, but being quick to learn and very observant, any one not prejudiced of the true facts would not have known that he had not had at least the usual educational facilities of any others of his acquaintance. He took special care to use the best language of which he was capable.

His father lived in Tuscarawas and Geauga Cos. Ohio, where he met the one who became his life companion, Eliza Miller Larr, daughter of David Larr and Nancy Miller Larr.

They were not married however, until her family had moved to Wright, Greene Co. Ind. Wright Twp. where David Bonham had previously made application to the U.S. Govt. for 120 acres of land at Wright, Greene, Co., Ind. making the initial deposit, and in 1848, April 10th there was issued to him, certificate #12467 for the above land, Jas. H. Folk President.

This land was hilly like his native state, and covered with virgin growth of timber, some of it quite large. Of this timber land, he cleared the major part of it with his own hands, fenced it and planted orchards and built barns.

He must have inherited much of his love for the hills and springs from his Virginia ancestors for in adding to the acres he got from the Government he purchased other land until he had 306 acres of this same rolling woodland, on which there were 6 or 8 springs of water as clear as crystal from which flowed a pure stream the year round.

At the foot of the hill upon which he built his three room house there flowed the spring that furnished water for the household, so cool that no ice was needed. He with his own hand and crude tools hewed out of solid sandstone a barrel shaped wall for this spring, and which when full must have held something like 25 gallons or perhaps 30. It was fed by a perpetual vein of a spring at the bottom and which never went dry.

Each morning found the water at the top, it mattered not how much had been used the day before. It overflowed into a wood trough where the dairy products were kept as cool as off of ice.

Many a wayworn traveler stopped to quench his thirst, and to bless the kind hand that so thoughtfully prepared this comfort for his fellow man.

Father's outstanding traits were his Piety, his Hospitality, and Honesty. He seemed to do a small act and these traits he made a strong effort to inculcate in the minds and hearts of his children, and it can be said he fairly succeeded.

Mother was a staunch helpmate in all his efforts, in everything he undertook, she was with him. She also was pious, most careful and painstaking and loving. She was a devoted Mother, and had many of the characteristics of her Tucker ancestry. There was never anything too hard for her to do for her loved ones, no sacrifice too great.

His motto was "TRUTH": I can truthfully and proudly say I never heard my parents quarrel, never any harsh words.

Father's motto was Hospitality. No man or woman was ever turned from his door, hungry or needy, and their name was a legion. I can remember distinctly, that to be alone, without someone, outside the family was the exception, never the rule. It seemed that the stranger sensed that his life and belongings were always safe under Father's roof.

I can distinctly remember one instance that gave me children such concern especially the younger ones.

One day a Frenchman drove up to Father's door and asked to be taken in for a few days. He had a great big black horse, as slick as could be made by brush and comb, which was hitched to something like a surrey as they were called then. This vehicle was packed with some heavy articles in boxes. These boxes were carried indoors, and into a back room which this man occupied. He stayed a few days and all at once he disappeared leaving his horse and luggage. He stayed away some three weeks or more and never a word from him.

Father took the precaution to heavily chain his horse to his stall, fed him well and watched developments. This horse was a very valuable animal, and Father did not want to think hastily of the man, but under the peculiar circumstances, he thought it best to be cautious. He never knew what was in the boxes. One day the man returned as suddenly as he went, and seemed much pleased to be back, remaining only a very short time. He said he had been to Cincinnati, Ohio, which was then a long way from our Indian home.

I could not begin to enumerate the different ones, who from time to time was an inmate of my father's home; and they were always welcome, though some for overstayed their time, but it all went as a matter of course. I suppose there was not a man with a better reputation, or had so large an acquaintance, as my father in that part of the state, and often people of other states and localities were his guests.

Having been denied the privilege of an early education, he was always foremost in any educational enterprise.

Every child that arrived at maturity, was sent to college, for at least long enough to get the culture that went with educational institutions of that time. My eldest brother William Bonham and his two youngest brothers attended Shurtleff College for a time.

David Elmer Milworth Bonham and Edward Smith Bonham were the two younger brothers.

Even Albert Bonham and our eldest sister Emily Missen Bonham, my sister Clarissa Allen and myself attended Franklin College of Indiana.

The two older children Dr. Alexander and Emily Missen attended Indiana Seminary as did the one who became the wife of the doctor, Elizabeth Shelton. David Elmer Milworth spent some time at Franklin College of Indiana also.

The older children, who were public school teachers, attended normal training schools at Sullivan, Ind., and Bloomfield, Ind. preparatory to taking up this profession, and which we may say they made a creditable showing.

Father and Mother both being great lovers of music (and of themselves they loved to sing, and were never happier than when all gathered around the large Mason & Berlin Organ, and poured out our hearts in song) they and we children the best advantages possible in music as well as educationally.

The Lebanon Baptist Church to which we all belonged, and where we devoted many years to its service, was first built on land donated by my father. It was later moved across the road to give space to the cemetery which was fast filling up, this land was also donated by my father.

Here lie those of the family who have passed away over to the better land, except Mr. Alexander, who is buried at Vancouver, Wash.

Here also lie my father's mother and father, David and Lucy Phillips Bonham and Elizabeth Sewell (Grandfather's sister who was born in Va.)

Here also rest a host of old neighbors and relatives of several generations. My Grandfather David Bonham Sr. was the first to be interred in this plot. He died April 1, 1860. His old tombstone is discolored and darkened by the ravages of time, but still legible and stands erect as a lone sentinel of the years gone by. Father, Mother and Emily Missen Bonham, two little sons, David Miller Bonham who died in infancy, and Samuel (who was drowned by falling face downward in the spring earlier described above), David Elmer Milworth Bonham, Alice, who died in early childhood and Clarissa Allen Bonham Terhune, and her daughter Fanny, have their last resting spot here, and many other loved ones too numerous to mention.

The Lebanon Church was much of its influence to my parents, who were staunch supporters, spiritually and financially.

For here was invariably the stopping place of all ministers, missionaries, lecturers and etc, that came to the locality. Men and women of eminent note and piety have at numerous times found shelter and hospitality under my father's roof. In this way we children came to contact men and women, who greatly influenced our lives for good in after years, and which was of great benefit in the upbuilding of our characters. As you can see the vision of his hospitality.

Father was always foremost in the advancement of the neighborhood agriculturally. Being a farmer and fruit grower with advanced ideas as to the cultivation and growth of his products, he was of great benefit to those around him by giving of his experience. He was not satisfied with anything less than the best. His orchards, of which included all varieties of fruits, was far superior to others. He had planted an apple orchard on the old homestead, which included the best known varieties, some of which are extinct at this time. This orchard covered several acres, some very few are standing and bearing at this date (Mar. 22, 1900).

He had two large peach orchards of fine varieties. His lands were for many years the boast of the neighborhood. He specialized in sheep raising in his later years, having only the finest of Merino breed.

At a point of perhaps 200 feet west of his farm was the highest point in all that country, on which was erected a steam and signal station which stood for years, on what is now known as Midland, Ind., which at one time was the center of coal operations, and which was now being abandoned as a coal field, worked out at that point, and developed in surrounding territory.

I have not been able to find out whether Father and Mother were married in Ohio or Indiana up to this time, but my impression is that they were married in the latter.

It is known that Mother's father and mother and grandfather Jacob Miller were living in Ind. in 1850 census.

I have the original land grant certificate #32457, issued at the Land Office at Vincennes, Ind. for 120 acres, dated April 12, 1840, and to this as the years rolled by he added to his farm until he had 506 acres.

The blood of his Virginia ancestors must have flowed in his veins for the reason he selected hilly land, on which was located 5 or 6 springs, bubbling over with cool sparkling water.

At the foot of the hill upon which the 6 room house stood, in which they began their wedded life, there flowed a small stream, fed by another spring some 100 feet toward the south, and there was the main spring that furnished water for the household, and many a weary traveler satisfied his thirst at this spring.

The walls of which Father dug out from solid stone, round in shape, larger at the top, shallow at the bottom, this was about 5 feet high, and in diameter, it must have been 30 inches.

There was a vein springing up from the bottom of the spring, that fed it, and it never went dry. The water might be all used up during the day, but before next morning it would be full and running over, into a special channel, prepared to receive it. In this box or channel water clear and sparkling flowed constantly where milk, butter, meats and other eatables were kept cool. Over the house which sheltered this spring, towered 3 stately weeping willows, completing the picture nature so wonderfully endowed.

The other springs scattered over his little estate were perpetual also.

More later about his agricultural pursuits, and stock and fruit raising.

Returning to his early married life, he and his like long companionship

Elinor Miller Larr Bonham, made sure of their Heavenly Father's injunction to "Seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you". (Matt. 6 Chapter V)

This they happily did, and set about establishing a home where Jehovah, God was recognized above all else. A family altar was set up and worship around that altar was strictly kept up while any member of this family remained here on earth.

Blessed memory of that gathering. No other memory so precious.

Praises to the Father of light for such parents, and thrice blessed for such noble lives. They made honesty and truth their standard, coupled with kindness and hospitality.

No neighbor was ever denied assistance.

I have very recently had one, our least and most adored friend's testimony of their goodness to them while in care here. The mother of this family was taken sick, and after a short illness died leaving the father with a family of 5 or 6 children, the eldest daughter just a little lass, and not any too strong, was overburdened by this sad loss of her mother, was too taken sick, and was very ill for many days, and she said when she returned to consciousness my Father was sitting by her bedside keeping the covers over her. This he had done for several nights, for the distressed father.

My friend said my mother had learned her how to cut out garments, and sew for her little brothers and sisters. (You will find the name of this friend perhaps in some footnote.)

Many such instances could be recalled, but this one appealed to me most of all for the reason that this friend was not much older than myself, and the thought of the losing of my mother was one of horror to me as it was to this girl companion.

MEMORIES OF MY GRANDPARENTS

Grandfather David Bonham died before I was born, and I have always felt that I missed much from my life by not having had the privilege to know him. There does not seem to have been any portraits of him in existence. (Pictures of David and Tacy Bonham following page 96 in BONHAM book revised 1959. H.B.H.)

He died at the home of Uncle John Bonham, his youngest son, April 1st, 1850, Greene Co., Indiana, Midland. My father David Bonham Jr. donated the land, from the northeast corner of the old homestead, for a burying ground. This land he entered from the Government, was of 120 acres, most of which he cleared off timber with his own hands, erecting all his own buildings with the aid of willing hands of his neighbors and relatives, tilled the soil alone, lived on the same farm, until his death on Nov. 16, 1891 at Midland, Ind. on his farm.

Grandmother Tacy Phillips, born in 1785, married David Bonham in 1803.

(this is in error, they were married in 1804. H.B.H.)

They moved from Va. to Ohio on horseback, with their five children, one carried in front and one behind, the others along with Grandfather, walked all the way, accompanied by his brother Smith Bonham and his wife who had probably not been married many years.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE JACOB BONHAM FAMILY

by ?

This Bonham family lived in Chester County, Tenn. but is not clearly known where their ancestors came from, nor who they were.

(The results of research on this line indicate that Jacob was a son of Henshank Jr. and Martha Ruyon. N.E.S.)

In the list of Pilgrims to America, 1600 to 1700, "George Bonham" 31 is registered as passing from the port of London, June, 20, 1635, on the boat Phillip, to Virginia. We quote from "The Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth" the following: "George Bonham appeared early in Plymouth, and in 1644 married, as his second wife, Sarah, daughter of George Norton."

His children were Ruth, Patteness, and George. "Nicholas Bonham" who was perhaps a brother of George, is in the list of persons admitted to inhabit Barnstable in 1633 to 1636. He married Hannah Fuller, daughter of Samuel Fuller, the second, their children were Hannah, Mary and Sarah. (It has now been definitely established and accepted that Nicholas was the son of George by his first wife in England. The above report on the children of Nicholas has led to much confusion as only the children, born in the church in New England are listed. The several children, including Nicholas, born in N.E. are not listed. N.E.S.)

This proves that some of the name came early to the Colonies to make their home in the new country; their pioneering spirit was one of the strong characteristics in those who later bore the name. Whether these men were our ancestors, so far as we know, not been proven but tradition in many branches of the family carries the idea that only one family came to the Colonies, and that all who bear the Bonham name are descendants of this one family. How true this is we do not know.

The head of the family from which we are descended was Jacob Bonham who lived and died in Chester Co., Tenn., close to N.E. line where many Bonhams lived. Jacob was born in 1720 and died in 1790. He was a Revolutionary soldier. Records show that he was a private in Captain Edmund Baxter's Co., and from 1772 to 1793 he was a Ranger on the Frontier in the Co. of Capt. in Richard Williamson.

Jacob Bonham in 1744, when he was twenty-two, married Miss Polly Ford who was then eighteen years of age; she was born in 1730, and died in 1795 at the age of sixty-five. They spent their lives in this county, and were buried there.

Jacob and Polly Bonham had as far as is known, only two sons; Jacob Jr. and Moses, one of whom was a Revolutionary soldier. (Research on this line indicates that there was a son Joseph who married Naomi Ford, no doubt a sister of Rebecca wife of Moses.) N.E.S.

Moses was born in 1773, and died in Va. in Nov. 1792. His wife was Rebecca Ford, born in 1751 and died in 1813; they were married in 1769.

(No record of them having children has been found. N.E.S.)

Moses was a member of Logan's Cavalry, 4th Reg. of Light Troopers.

He drew in settlement for his services, 200 acres of land in Virginia.

Records of the military service of Moses and his father Jacob are found in Gen. Archives. Vol. 4, p 218, 3rd series Vol 23 p 302, 5th series Vol. 23 p 302.

The other son Jacob Jr., was born in 1749, 1750; in 1785 in Chester County, Maryland; in 1790 he married Mary Neal, he being twenty-one and she nineteen years of age. We know nothing of his family, nor when she and Jacob moved to Maryland. Four after his death, which occurred in 1797 she took her family of eight children to Salisbury Co., Tenn. perhaps her sons sons of her Maryland relatives lived there. We know the names of the eight children of Jacob Jr. and Mary Neal Bonham, but we do not know the order of their birth, so, do not know who was youngest or eldest.

There were four sons and four daughters, the sons were John, David, Jacob and William.

The daughters were Rebecca, Mary, Elizabeth and Mary. This data is from records written by our uncle Josiah Borden, only a part of which is now in existence. He was the oldest son; there were several brothers, Rebecca a married, William Borden, and Mary, James Borden, both these families moved to Greene County, adjoining North, Tenn. Co. Elizabeth married a Methodist minister, the Rev. Jacob Borden, Mary married Thomas Borden.

Later all these families moved to Ohio. Of the sons of John, who was perhaps the oldest, married Rebecca Borden in Ohio, and moved to Licking Co., Ohio, about 1800, he was accidentally killed in a log rolling near Newark in 1870. One of his descendants, David Borden of Cincinnati, who we once had the pleasure of meeting at Frank Jacob Thompson's in Boulder, Ohio, spent some time in research on the Borden lines; in early life he was a teacher and later a prominent attorney of Cincinnati, a 32nd Degree Scottish-Rite Mason, a fine and cultured gentleman with the very look and type of features which we know so well in the sons of Harford Borden; the same kindly blue eyes, the fine forehead, the clear skin, the same pleasant expression our Father and uncles had. We all felt a sense of kinship with him at once. He was a bachelor, and had spent much time in travel at home and abroad. He passed away in 1915.

Josiah Borden, one of the sons of Jacob Jr. and Nancy Mason, was quite a revivalist Baptist preacher, he lived in Jackson Co., Ohio; was a bachelor, and said to be odd. Of James, the fourth son the record is missing.

The two children of Jacob Jr. and Nancy of whom we know the most are Harford our grandfather, and Mary, who married Jacob Haver; she was sometimes called Polly; the names of these two bring to mind their grandmother Polly Harford. Mary was seven years older than Harford, and at eighteen married Jacob Haver, living to be eighty-three. Both she and her husband are buried in Western Cemetery at Lancaster, O.

They were members of the Presbyterian Church, respected and loved by friends and neighbors. Two of their several children are living, Edward Haver of South Bend, Ind., and Samuel of Berkeley, Calif. (Note this article written not known, but knew it was much of years ago.)

Harford Borden, your grandfather was also born in Washington Co. Md., Nov. 15, 1761; his father Jacob Jr. died when Harford was five years old; in his tenth year his mother moved to Washington Co., Penn., on the southwest border of the state; perhaps as said before because she had relatives there. Harford remained with his mother on the farm until 1799; being then in his nineteenth year, he set out for the west to seek his fortune, going down the Ohio River from St. Louis now Littleburg, on a flat boat to the mouth of the Scioto River; then up the valley of that river to the town of Chillicothe, in Ross Co., Ohio. A new town Fairbridge, 18 miles south-west of Chillicothe, on pointed Creek, was being laid out. Here he went and decided to remain; he worked at a forge owned by Christian Berman, helped to lay out farms for others, and later for himself. He married here on April 30, 1800, a Miss Rebecca Mason, the daughter of a Quaker from N.J. He scarcely anything about he fully, except that she was a sister-in-law, but Phillips, and a half-brother Joe Mason. Following their marriage they settled in Fairbridge and opened a hotel, the only one in the place, conducting it for a number of years, staying on the farm at the same time. Then the war of 1811 broke against the British and Indians. He served as Captain, Aug. 30, 1812 to Oct. 31, 1812 in Captain Cary's Co., of Pittman, Cal. John Borden and Amos, first Regiment of the Division Ohio Militia; this company was from Ross Co. Our uncle Josiah says that he was also Captain during that time through to the close of the war. After the war he returned home and took up his former occupations. While he was in the service of the militia, he met a girl named Mary, a servant and later and gave a part of the life had three children who could not walk; the oldest was incapacitated by lameness and the second was not old enough to walk when the third was born. We mention this to illustrate how pioneer women met and solved the problems of life, carrying their own responsibilities and those of their husbands if occasion demanded.

In 1824 Warford Bonham sold out his holdings in Ross Co. and moved his family to Hickaway County, adjoining on the north, purchasing and improving a farm eleven miles from Circleville, a town on the Scioto River.

Here he built a home and lived for ten years; the house was a big double log house with kitchen; the two rooms had fireplaces, but no connecting doors between, so that to go from one to the other, it was necessary to go through the kitchen. In the years spent there the family had grown to twelve children; one dying in infancy. At this time—the fall of 1834—two of the daughters were married. Minnie, the oldest of the family, was then Mrs. Joseph Taylor and had a small son Joe. Eliza had married John Hopkins in Aug. of that year.

One frosty morning in Oct. Warford with all his family, including his two son-in-laws and grandson, left Ohio for the prairies of Illinois. 1834

They had one four-horse prairie schooner and two two-horse wagons filled with furniture that could not be obtained in Ill., and household goods of various kinds. They brought several cows with them, and we have heard our father talk of the box which had gold in it, and how he liked to look inside, as it seemed he was privileged to do so, as he got older; although he was but little past three years old when they left Ohio, he remembered the early morning start and the house they were leaving.

The journey took four weeks time; the course westward took them through Indianapolis, they reaching Ill. River at Tekin, Tazewell County. It had been a fatiguing journey, but comfortable winter quarters for the family were secured, and Warford, with the older sons and sons-in-law set out to prospect for a future home.

Here we quote from Jeriah Bonham—"Having decided on a location, in two weeks we cut the logs, drew them together, built three log cabins fourteen feet square, raised the clapboards and covered them, and returned to Tazewell Co. In Feb. following, the families all moved to their new homes; and much discomfort from severe cold weather and blowing snow storms; the feed for stock and teams, and the family provisions had all to be hauled from Tazewell Co. which necessitated several tedious trips during the coldest weather. The early spring months were taken up in fencing the land; then came breaking prairie and making other farm improvements. The end of the first year found all in comfortable homes, with crops sufficient for all home uses. On this farm Warford Bonham lived, honored and respected by all his new fellow settlers who took the earliest opportunity of electing him Justice of Peace; in 1836 on the organization of the new County of Marshall, he was elected one of the county commissioners; after serving one term in each office he declined re-election. His farming operations prospered and for over 20 years he managed his farm himself."

In 1853 Rebecca Bonham passed away leaving her companion of fifty years to complete life's journey without her tender companionship and unailing courage; she was a woman of rare qualities, quiet, unassuming, a devoted and loving mother. Our father in the later years of his life especially, often spoke of his mother with such tender regard and affection and appreciation of her fine character. Warford Bonham died in his 88th year, 1869, and lies beside his wife Rebecca in the Bonham Cemetery north of Springfield. He and his wife were members of the Christian Church.

These are only a few brief facts in the lives of men and women who were the finest kind of pioneers; knowing all the hardships of pioneer life, yet, withal, they knew the joys of subduing the wilderness, and had the satisfaction of building homes where none had been before; they must have loved nature with keen love, else they would not have pushed westward as they did to help in the development of new communities.

All of the descendants of Jacob Bonham, who are over the age of eighteen and twenty-one are eligible respectively, to membership in the organizations of the Fighters of the Amer. Revolution and the Sons of the Amer. Revolution; the necessary requirements for membership, which usually come through invitation, are good moral character and a clear line to an ancestor who gave military service in the Revolution. JOHN OF BIRCH FOR BIRTH, and we will be glad to give all the data necessary to proper filling out of such applications for membership, to any one of Jacob Bonham's descendants.

As you well know the eleven children of Hartford and Rebecca Mason Bonham who grew to maturity and married. Mahala, Sarah, Eliza, George Washington, Jerich, William Mason, Hartford, Clayton Mason, Mary Ann, Benson Davis, and Emily Jane--lived for many years in the townships of Whitefield and Struhen, with the exception of Sarah who died in Ohio in young womanhood of pneumonia, very shortly after her marriage to Mr. Henderson.

Mention should be made also of the military services in the Civil War of William Bonham, the sons of George Bonham, -Ira, Hartford who died somewhere in the South, Charlie and George; Addison and Newton Langworthy, sons of Mahala, Jerome, son of Hartford, and Edward Bonham, son of Jerich, who enlisted as a private early in the war was Brevetted Brigadier General in 1865, and mustered out in Jan. 1866.

There are also, some of the younger generation who participated in the World War--Bill Hill, son of Corn Bonham Hill; Benson D. and Clayton Dean Bonham, sons of Willard; Frank M. Duncan, son of Corrie Farmer Duncan; Victor C. Prevost, son of Carrie Haver Prevost, whose line goes back through Mary Bonham Haver to our Revolutionary ancestor, Jacob Bonham; and Miss Elizabeth Bonham daughter of Rebecca L. Bonham, was in the Y.W.C.A. work in Paris. No doubt there are many others with services we are not familiar.

The present generation of the Bonham Family can feel very proud indeed to bear that name untarnished, (so far as we know), with any wrong-doing, through generation after generation; with a record of achievement in their chosen spheres and occupations, second to no family in this country.

While some of the family reached very high places in political or military way--except Edward Bonham--the average achievement of our family rates very high, and personally we have been proud of our line.

SIGNERS OF THE MAYFLOWER PACT

Bradford History does not give the names of those who signed the ORIGINAL DOCUMENT. The earliest history of the signers is contained in Nathaniel Morton's New England Memorial, published in 1669.

HERE FOLLOWS THE REASON FOR THE COMPACT

I shall a little retorne backe, and begin with a combination made by them before they came ashore; being the firste foundation of their Government in this place.

Occasioned partly by ye discontented and mutinuous speeches, that some amongst them let fall, from them in ye ship; that when they came ashore, that they would use their own libertie, for none had power to command them, the patents they had were for Virginia, and not for New England, which belonged to another Government, with ye Virginia had nothing to doe.

And partly, that such an act by them done (this their condition considered) might be as firm as any patent; and in some respects be more sure.

Ye form was as followeth;

In ye name of God Amen, we whose names are underwritten, the Loyal subjects of our Dread Sovereign, Lord James, by grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of ye Faith.

"Having undertaken, for ye grace of God, and advancement of ye Christian Faith, and in honor of our King, and countrie, a voyage to plant ye first colony, in ye northern part of Virginia." Doe by these presents solemnly and mutually, in ye presence of God, and of one another severant and combine ourselves, into a civil body politic, for our better ordering and preservation, and furtherance of aforesaid. And by virtue hereof, enact, constitute, and frame, just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions and offices, from time to time as shall be thought most meete, and convenient for ye general good of ye colonies unto which we all promise, all due submission, and obedience." "In witness hereof, we here under subscribe our names at Cape Cod, ye 11 of Nov. and ye year of the raigne of Lord King James of England, France and Ireland, ye 10th, and of Scotland ye Fiftie Fourth." PATIENCE BONHAM SHAND--WIFE OF ALAMO HERO
JAMES B. BONHAM
Last close lateral descendant.

From THE BONHAM DAILY FAVORITE, Bonham Tex. By Everettta Love Blair.
Nov. 6, 1960.

The Alamo stands once again in brilliant spotlight in our nation's history as election year resounds with calls to the people to return to the fighting spirit and ideals of America's pioneer days.

For Mrs. Gadsden Shand, beloved citizen of Columbia, S.C. the accent on the Alamo has very special and poignant meaning. At the age of 89, the former Patience Bonham, daughter of killed Lt. Luke Bonham, South Carolina's distinguished governor for the years 1862 to 1864, during the Confederacy, is the last close lateral descendant of James Butler Bonham, brother of her father, and famed bachelor hero of the Alamo.

In one of the world's great battles for freedom, on Mar. 6, 1836, the volunteer fighter James B. Bonham, and 186 other defenders, the total force protecting the beleaguered little Texas mission-turned-into-a-fort, died under the assault of Mexican General Santa Anna and an overwhelming force of more than 3,000 men.

"Thermopylae had its messenger of defeat. The Alamo had none".

These stark words are carved on one side of a square ink-stand that was chiseled from a piece of the Alamo and sent to Killebrew Bonham by San Antonio friends as a memento following the Alamo's fall. On the three other sides of the ink-stand are the Lone Star of Texas, the names "Bonham, Crockett, Bowie, Travis", and over a dark area, "The Blood of heroes hath stained me". It is one of Mrs. Shand's cherished possessions.

I saw this dramatic relic, along with innumerable family papers, scrapbooks, newspaper clippings, some yellowed with age, but kept with devoted care by Mrs. Shand, when I called upon her in her home on Wilmet Ave., where she lives with her niece, Miss Roberta Alarich, great-niece to James Butler Bonham.

As a Texan now making my home in Cincinnati, I was thrilled beyond measure when I discovered quite casually that a close relative of Bonham of the Alamo was living here. My hostess at a Palmotta preview Mrs. Clyde Ferrell, presented me to a lady seated on the other side of her, saying that I was from Texas, Miss Roberta Alarich said, guiltily "An ancestor of mine was in the battle of the Alamo. Bonham was his name."

She had given the name the long "o" pronunciation used by the family, and at first I didn't understand. Then when she said she was the great-niece of James Butler Bonham, and that she lived with her aunt, Patience Bonham Shand, the Alamo's here's niece, and last close relative, I came to instant life, and I couldn't rest until I had met Mrs. Shand.

For me, the magic name from the Alamo has always been Bonham.

Texans have the Alamo, "Cradle of Texas Liberty", enshrined in their hearts, but usually there is a special enshrinement, too, of some particular hero for whom a town or county was named. My "patron saint" of Alamo is Bonham. For him the town of Bonham was named, in the rich black-land area not very far from Dallas, where my father Everett Love, a twin son of William Alva Lee Love and Maria Frost Mathews Love, was born on the family farm, the area where my ancestors had come to make their home soon after the War between the States, some from burned homes and despoiled lands of the war scars.

They were the Love, Hewitt and Ross families, from Virginia and Kentucky, the Mathews from Ohio, and Ill. and on my mother's side, the Lantieri, Rich and Thornton families from Maryland and Pa. In the Bonham cemetery are my grandfather "Lee Love" and my great-grandfather James

He has a six feet high monument.

In my happy memories are many scenes of family reunions held in the big, rambling white house of my grandfather near in Bonham, the town that has a statue of James Butler Bonham in its courthouse square.

When the house in town was burned, then the reunions moved out to the family farm near Bonham. Through the farm runs the Salt Dike Creek, a tributary of which runs through the farm of Bonham's most famous citizen, the Honorable Sam Rayburn, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Upon my discovery of the place of Jas. B. Bonham in Columbia, I wrote happily to Mr. Rayburn, and he sent a letter immediately to Mrs. Shand, saying that it was a "joy" to him to learn of her, a close relative of the man for whom his hometown was named. He said he looked forward to greeting her when he should have the opportunity of coming to Columbia.

On the day that I met Mrs. Shand, I took along for her a bouquet of flowers, with a small Texas flag attached, which was given to me recently in Washington by Miss Alla Clary, secretary to Mr. Rayburn. To me, she was a living shrine, and I had difficulty at first, speaking over the lump in my throat, was afraid that the quick tears in my eyes would spill over.

But Mrs. Shand, gracious and dynamic as a person 30 years younger, soon put me at ease. She talked eagerly and proudly of her Alamo ancestor and, aided by Miss Roberta, brought out her extensive collection of mementoes of James Bonham's epic story.

"Petite" as Mrs. Shand is affectionately called by her family and friends, amazingly belied her years, I thought as I watched her, beautifully erect, with her hair arranged smoothly back from her forehead and falling into soft wings on each side which made a frame for her dark eyes that were alert, penetrating behind her glasses. She presented a most fashionable picture, in a lovely floral print dress, pinned with carved ivory brooch, with matching ear-rings.

Her features, as were Miss Roberta's were the classically-chiseled features reminiscent of James B. Bonham—a "Bonham" look, which one saw repeated again and again in the family pictures which Petite showed me, including those of her 10 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

"Petite" received her name from her sister, who was Miss Roberta's mother. She was only one year old at her sister's wedding, she told me.

She was the 13th of 14 children, in that Millidge Bonham called his "ante bellum and post bellum family".

In the fascinating scrap-book kept by Millidge Bonham, one reads of the Panon and Pythais friendship of James Butler Bonham and William Barrett Travis, who were reared with in five miles of each other near Edgfield, S.C. The two rode, hunted and went to parties together, and, after James Bonham had been admitted to the bar in 1830, both went to Alabama to practice law. Travis, the adventurer, went on to Texas, however, to be a colonist and, later, to fight in the Texas Army against the despotism of Mexico. Travis wrote back to Bonham and urged his friend to join him in the "stirring times" in Texas.

Mrs. Shand recalls her father's vivid account of James Bonham's horse-back ride from Alabama to Edgfield to say goodbye to his mother and brother, Millidge. And, in the scrapbook, we read a dispatch from New Orleans Bulletin, dated Feb. 8, 1836, which was brought to So. Carolina by the schooner "Henry", and which states, "A strong force is now marching upon Texas, probably not less than from 7 to 10,000 men."

With that anxiety the Bonham family in So. Car. awaited news of their handsome, dashing young bachelor member who had gone to fight in Texas.

This young Southern gallant, who was described in news stories later as "handsome, and gentle in disposition, though fierce in battle."

He had been everything a young girl's heart could desire, yet he had not married but had gone to Texas to stand beside his friend, and to die in the idealistic cause of freedom.

The story given to the family, and this, Mrs. Shand stresses, is the authentic version, verified by Gov. Sam Houston, of young Bonham's role at the Alamo: is that, after sending out several messengers on fruitless missions for reinforcements of the fort, Colonel Travis, the commander, turned painfully to his beloved friend, and sent him through the Mexican lines for aid. Failing, too, to get the much-needed numbers from the hard-pressed areas, Bonham turned back toward the fort with desperate haste to report to Travis.

He had been accompanied by Samuel A. Maverick and John W. Smith. When they reached the heights overlooking San Antonio, and saw that the doomed Alamo was encircled by Santa Anna's troops, Smith and Maverick deemed it suicide to seek an entrance. Smith and Maverick, by their own honorable statements afterward to both Governor Houston and Willledge Bonham, urged Bonham to retire with them. He sternly refused, but said there was no need for them, both married men, to return to certain death and leave bereaved families. "I alone will report to Travis", he said "or die in the attempt."

Dressed as a Mexican with white handkerchief, streaming from his hat, as previously arranged with Travis, Bonham made a dash through the Mexican ranks on his cream colored horse, bullets raining on him from all sides. As he ran the gauntlet, the gate of the Alamo swung open, admitting him, and his horse, riddled with bullets, fell dead at the feet of the Alamo defenders. Bonham fell on March 6th, beside his friend Travis.

For his great service, James Butler Bonham, a volunteer, was awarded the rank of commander, and in the splendid Cemetery in San Antonio commemorating the commanders of the Alamo, Bonham, in his famous courier outfit, takes his honored place beside Travis, Crockett and Bowie.

Before I left Mrs. Shand, I asked hesitantly whether I might take her picture. Miss Roberts had suggested that I leave my camera in the car until I had talked to Mrs. Shand about the matter. She said that her aunt was much adverse to having her picture made.

To my delight, Mrs. Shand consented and posed in a chair in front of a wall covered with pictures of rectors and other dignitaries of the Episcopal church. To my greater delight, my pictures of her and Miss Roberts met with their approval, and, later, they arranged for me to get a picture of four generations of lateral descendants of James B. Bonham in Columbia--Mrs. Shand, her daughter, Mrs. Charles Adams, who was Annie Bonham Shand; her great-niece, Mrs. J.P. Melton, the former Martha Aldrich Tompkins, and her great-great-nephew, Frank Melton.

Frank who is a senior at Sewanee, majoring in history, has dark, brooding eyes. When someone remarked that the blood-blakened Alamo ink-stand was a grim thing, Frank said fervently, "I love it".

The twentieth-century idealism in the vein of that of young Melton's illustrious ancestor of the Alamo, drew a quick look of pride and affection from Mrs. Shand. For Frank and her grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and other Bonham descendants to come, she is valiantly at work, writing the story of this, one of the most distinguished families of the South.

BRAVE ALABAMA MEN DIED IN BLOODY ALAMO BATTLE

By Bob Ingram

From Advertiser-Journal      Montgomery, Alabama.
124 YEARS AGO

Mar. 6, 1960

On March 6, 1836, in a Catholic Mission in Texas, 185 Americans died in one the most famous battles in this nation's history.

In this instance the 185 brave men did not die in vain. Americans were so enraged by the slaughter and subsequent mass burning of the bodies that prompt action was taken to avenge the massacre of these men. Rallying around the battlecry "Remember the Alamo" American forces quickly secured independence for Texas from Mexico, and its dictator Santa Anna.

Among those who died in that hopeless fight to death at the Alamo were several Alabamans; just how many is a debatable point among historians.

A marker in the Alamo chapel identified two men from Alabama as being among those who died in that brief, fierce struggle—James Buchanan and William T. Malone.

But Archivists at the Department of Archives and History contend there were in fact five Alabama men who fought and died at the Alamo.

They include Lt. James Butler Bonham, Robert W. Ballentine and Colonel William Barrett Travis, the commander of the Alamo troops.

Records on all but Bonham and Travis are rather skimpy. They merely show that Buchanan was a 23-year-old private who enlisted from Alabama; Malone an 18-year-old private who enlisted from Alabama, and Ballentine, as an 18-year-old private who was born in Scotland but enlisted from Alabama. (The Alamo marker identifies Ballentine as being from Scotland.)

Travis and Bonham are both listed as South Carolinians on the monument at the Alamo, and perhaps this correct for Bonham.

These two men who were to die as heroes in the Alamo grew up as boyhood friends in South Carolina. However, Travis at the age of 9 or 10 moved to what is now Conecuh County where he remained until he moved to Texas in 1831. There are varying reports as to why Travis left Alabama. One story has it that he left after murdering the man he thought to be his wife's lover.

Bonham spent considerable less time in Alabama. He moved to Montgomery in 1833 to practice law, but at the urging of Travis, he went to Texas late in 1835.

Bonham, incidentally was the last man to enter the Alamo before the battle. He had been sent with a message by Travis and was urged by his friends not to return to the doomed mission. But Bonham insisted that his assignment required his return, and he did.

Travis, described as a handsome, foppishly dressed man, was not long in becoming a leader when he arrived in Texas. He immediately became active in the "War Party" which favored complete independence for Texas from Mexico. His political foe was Moses Austin, who at the time opposed violent action against Santa Anna.

Open warfare finally erupted when Santa Anna decided once and for all to force Texas to join the other provinces of Mexico in being subservient to his will.

The fight at Alamo was a tragic heart-breaking affair. For weeks it was apparent that Santa Anna intended to attack and to crush the small garrison at the mission.

Time after time Col. Travis in most eloquent language, sent out pleas for reinforcements but all to no avail.

On Feb. 24, 1836, less than two weeks before he and his men were to die, Travis sent word word out perhaps his most famous message.

It read in part:

"Fellow Citizens and Compatriots: I am besieged by a 1,000 or more Mexicans under Santa Anna. I have sustained a continual bombardment and cannonade for 24 hours. I have answered the demand (to surrender) with a cannon shot and our flag still waves proudly from the walls.

I shall never surrender or retreat. I call on you in the name of liberty, of patriotism and everything dear to the American character to come to our aid with all dispatch. If this call is neglected I am determined to sustain myself as long as possible and die like a soldier who never forgets what he is due to his own honor and that of his country. Victory or death."

Eloquent though his messages were they fell on deaf ears. One unit of 500 men started out for Alamo but the line of march had proceeded only 100 yards when the axle on a supply wagon broke. This so disturbed the commander that he called off the march.

On the night of March 5 a Mexican woman inside the Alamo slipped out and informed Santa Anna of the small garrison within. It was then he decided to attack with a force of some 7,000 troops.

Shortly before the attack Travis allegedly called his men together, drew a line on the floor and said, "Those who wish to die like heroes and patriots, come over to me." As the story goes --and most historians brand this as pure bunk--all but one man stepped across the line. Jim Bowie of Bowie knife fame was ill at the time and lying on a cot. He asked that his cot be carried over the line. Its a good story true or false.

But what happened next morning was not fiction. The Mexicans attacked en masse. Travis was one of the first to die; Bowie died in his cot, with Mexican bodies scattered all around him. Davy Crockett was the final officer to die.

The 135 men who died didn't quit easily. An estimated 1,800 Mexicans fell before the last American went down.

Immediately after the battle ended Santa Anna ordered all bodies of the Americans--save one--to be stacked up and burned. The only not burned was that of Bowie, who was Santa Anna's brother-in-law.

NOTES ON THE ALAMO BATTLE.

"The storming of the Alamo took place on the morning of the 6th of March, the second after the conference of the Mexican officers.

The events of that memorable morning, on which was exhibited perhaps the most obstinate and determinate valor ever known have been but very partially related, since not an American belonging to the fort, except a woman, Mrs. Dickinson, and a negro man, Col. Travis' servant, was left to tell the tale." According to Mrs. Dickinson, a few days before the final assault three Texans entered the fort during the night and inspired them with sanguine hopes of speedy relief, thus animated the men to contend to the last. A Mexican woman deserted one night, and going over to the enemy informed them of the very inferior numbers of the Texans, which Col. Travis made them confident of success and emboldened them to make the final assault, which they did on the morning of the 6th of Mar.

"The end of Davy Crockett, of Tenn., the great hunter of the West, was as glorious as his career in life had been conspicuous. He and his companions were found with heaps of dead around them, when they had immolated on the altar of Texas Liberty".

"The storming of the fort had lasted less than an hour. Col. Travis had stood on the walls cheering his men, and exclaiming "Hurrah my boys" till he received the shot of which he fell. A Mexican rushed upon him and lifted his sword to destroy his victim, who collecting his expiring energies, directed a thrust at his intruder's foot, which changed their fortunes, - for the victim became the victor."

NEW JERSEY RECORDS

BENAJAH DUNHAM

The registrars selected to arrange local government were John Smalley, Nicholas Bonham, and Daniel Denton, who were sworn in Sept. 6, 1673.

Among the list of officers of militia elected, and sworn in by order of the Council of War, was Benajah Dunham, as captain of the Piscataway squad.

THE DUNHAM FAMILY

Among Benajah Dunham's neighbor's who early settled in Piscataway, was Nicholas Bonham, who raised a family of children, in the little hamlet called Bonhamtown. He emigrated from Barnstable, on Cape Cod, somewhere near the same time that the Durns, Fitz-Randolphs, Brakes, Martins, Dunhams and others came to this section of East Jersey. Mr. Bonham's wife whom he married in 1658, was Hannah Fuller, oldest daughter of Mr. Samuel Fuller, one of the "Mayflower" passengers, who came over from Holland to America in 1620. The children born in New England to Nicholas and Hannah Bonham were the following, whose families in after years attained a prominence and usefulness in Piscataway Township.

NATHAN BONHAM, the oldest child, married, Aug. 19, 1677, Daniel Livingston, one of the yeomanry of the town.

MARY BONHAM, born Oct. 4, 1661, married July 15, 1681, the subject of this sketch, Edmund Bonham.

SARAH BONHAM, born in 1664, married 1681, John Fitz-Randolph, one of the four brothers who moved into the township with their mother from Barnstable, Mass. (1669).

HEZEKIAH BONHAM, born 1670, (probably in East Jersey), married 1690, Mary Dunn, daughter of the pioneer planter, Hugh Dunn, one of the original patentees of the town in 1666.

In his will made Feb. 6, 1683, Nicholas provides as follows;

ITEM I- I order and appoint ye all my chattell with my household goods shall remain in ye hands of my executors, hereafter named, for ye support of my family and ye bringinge of my children, and as any of them marries, such part of ye said cattell and goods to be given them as my executors shall think meet.

ITEM- I will and bequeath unto my grandchildren now living or shall be borne within a year after ye date hereof, one bible to each of them to be bought and paid for out of my estate by my executors.

ITEM- After ye decease of my said wife what chattells, goods or land that is then undisposed of, I do will and bequeath unto my son Hezekiah Bonham, he beinge my sole Heire, excepting ye legacies before mentioned.

This reference to Nicholas Bonham and his children, made to show the intimate relationship which existed between his family and those of the Lantams, Durns and Fitz-Randolphs.

It is a matter of accepted tradition that in the spring of 1689, Edmund and his brother-in-law, John Fitz-Randolph and Hezekiah Bonham, and the latter's father-in-law, Hugh Dunn, John Smalley and John Brake, these six men were publically constituted a gospel church, by the help of Rev. Thomas Killingsworth, from south Jersey. He was ordained as a Baptist clergyman, recently from Norwich, England.

His daughters married into neighboring families of similar names.

Mary became the wife of Hezekiah Bonham, whom some think is rightly entitled to some of the honor of starting the Abolition Society in Piscataway; Elizabeth married John Lanyon and Martha was chosen as the life companion of Jeremiah Drake. Nathl Barn, the father of these nine children, lived but five years after the public organization of the First-day Baptist Church, dying Nov. 16, 1694.

John Smalley, another constituent member of the Piscataway Baptist church, was son of John, who came from England in the vessel "Francis and James" (1632) with Edward Winslow and others. His native home was in the same third of the Drakes, who had lived there from the days of the Norman Conquest. His descendants found a congenial place after landing in Mass., with liberty loving Baptists, of those islands. From that colony John Smalley came to Piscataway in 1670-1. He married Oct. 18, 1670, Lydia Martin (daughter of John), and their family consisted of sons, Jonathan, John Jr., Benjamin, Elisha, and daughters, Lydia, Martha, and Phoebe.

Hazekiah Bonham, to whom previous reference has been made, was another of this constituency of six brothers. It was not Nicholas Bonham, his father, as tradition has always transmitted the name who represented the Bonham family at the foundation of the old Baptist church. Nicholas Bonham died July 26, 1684, nearly five years before the organization of the church. Hazekiah, his son, was the son, and was born in 1670, of good Puritan ancestry. His mother (Hannah Fuller) was a daughter of one of the "Mayflower" passengers, a young lad on that memorable voyage, Mr. Samuel Fuller, who married in 1635 (Apr. 8) by Captain Miles Standish in Plymouth Colony to Jane Lathrop, daughter of good Puritan John Lathrop, of Scituate and Barnstable churches.

ARTICLE VI

It is noticeable that no brother by the name of "Bonham" was on the membership roll at this beginning (1705-15). Not till a full generation afterwards does the name Sedekiah Bonham appear as one interested in the welfare of the new church.

HISTORY

The first constitutions of the church were originally members of the first day Baptists church; and continued such down to 1700 or 1701; about that time, Mr. Edmund Dunham admonished one Hazekiah Bonham who was doing some servile work on Sunday; Bonham put on him proving that the first day of the week was holy by divine institution: this set Mr. Dunham on examining the point: the consequence was, rejecting the first day; and receiving the fourth commandment as moral, and therefore unchangeable.

NICHOLAS BONHAM

Through the marriage of Nicholas Bonham and Hannah Fuller, daughter of Samuel Fuller and Jane Lathrop this Mayflower lineage has been established for many years.

SERGEANT NICHOLAS BONHAM, (b ca 1633 d 1684), first of Plymouth Colony, then of Piscataway, whose name has persevered through the succeeding years of history, with favored characters of sturdiness, virility and church loyalty.

That he was a son of George Bonham, first of Plymouth Colony, by a first wife of the latter, seems most conclusive to the writer. He married Hannah Fuller, daughter of Samuel Fuller and Jane Lettrey Fuller, Mayflower passenger, (vide part two p 818). He gave the name to Bonhamtown, Woodbridge Township, Middlesex County N.J., which is five miles northeast from New Brunswick and is so preserved to this day.

There were the known children of this family.

1 Hannah 2 Mary 3 Sarah 4 Elizabeth 5 Nicholas 6 Elijah 7 Hester 8 Samuel 9 Jane 10 Priscilla. The son Samuel died at 10 years of age, and the other sons disappeared from the records, early, leaving only the son HESTERIAN BONHAM, pioneer preacher and stalwart churchman, to carry on the distinction for the name. The daughters, however intermarried with other famous Piscataway families and are buried, immemorably in the ancestral lineage of the Past.

BONHAM

The most interesting personality in estimation, to appear in Piscataway, bringing with him the Mayflower descent and traditions, was NICHOLAS BONHAM, first of Plymouth Colony. He was a very forceful character, and because of the rather unusual name and his active participation in colonial affairs, this sur name is indelibly engraved upon these first settlements. Bonhamtown remains a formal town, as witness to this history.

NICHOLAS BONHAM is definitely linked with that first GEORGE BONHAM who was transported to Virginia, 20th of June 1635, where the entry specifically spells the name "George Bonham" (sic). He is entered as then of age 31, and therefore must have been born about 1604. It has been variously agreed and disputed that he was a brother of NICHOLAS BONHAM.

It is much more rational, logical, and has much more support, that, as a matter of fact, he was the father of NICHOLAS BONHAM by his first wife, whom he must have married about 1625 in England.

The first prevalent error to refute is, that "Bonham" is of any import; it is a phonetic corruption of the name and not correct, in any of its uses.

Bonham was secondarily English and originally a local or place name in Somerset, Eng. In all of the authorities relating to Essex, Eng. the name is constantly used as Bonham. It was also existent in Buckinghamshire.

Thomas Bonham was a famous English Physician and writer as early as 1630 and, perhaps, the most famous modern American representative was the Confederate General, in 1862, Willodge L. Bonham, showing a continuity of this form of name for over three hundred years. The first will appearing in Probate Court of Canterbury Abstracts of Wills, Register, Series, 1620, contains a reference, for the year 1619-20, to "Mr. Bonham" apparently then of London.

It is interesting to note that William Bonham was the son-in-law in 1535 of John Clere of the town of Colchester, Eng. and in the same authority there is a footnote reference to the marriage of Benjamin Cliton of Portsmouth, N.H. who died in 1871, after having married there Elizabeth Bonham. In connection with the Plymouth Colony family seems unavailing though unproven.

However the origin of the name was already known, and it is to be found in French expression for "a good man", and the original patronymic was undoubtedly Bonhomme. The coat-of-arms originally granted to this family are very clearly set forth in "Memorial General", by J.B. Ristey. The earlier Latin or Italian form was "Bonhomme".

The Maryland family of this name is most interesting. There the name first appeared as "Boner", corrected to Bonham. In an item relating to the same person. The first there was Isaac Bonham, coming in the "Ark and Dove", 1633. In a court proceeding "I. del Bonham" made an affidavit, 1657 aged 36 or thereabouts. He appeared as a witness, 1657 as a defendant, "Samuel Bonham" 1658, and as a witness in 1659. In the latter, he was associated with "Richard Smith", who shipped servants from Boston.

In the same Maryland records appeared contemporaneously, "John Bonham", 1657-9, associated with William Lawrell, and they both disappeared from the records. It is significant that George Bonham was headed for Virginia and landed in Plymouth Colony, and that Nicholas Bonham of N.J. had a son Samuel Bonham.

SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST CHURCH--MEMBERS AT PISCATAWAY, 1722

The members, as preserved in a list, which is probably incomplete, with some clear errors, in names, as spelled, showed the number 44 males and 29 females, as per original records and existing.

As this represented the Separatist or Disunionist Movement, sometime ca 1706, or later, of members of the FIRST SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST CHURCH AT PISCATAWAY, in order to form the new SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST CHURCH, which separated families, and caused some religious contentions, the members by 1722 is not only interesting, but very significant, as far as possible to run the tide, a recitation of the list by families is important; like-also, where no husband or wife appears in the list, it is attempted to show him or her, even though the marriage was afterwards, as of no relationship. The numbers used are in order of original list, and the parenthetical names are those supplied by the writer. (Henceforth)

Rev. Edmund Bonham was most prominent and influential in organizing the First Baptist Church at Wiscasset, and it was while circulating as expounder and deacon of that church he had his famous argument with Nathaniel Bonham about the right uses of the Sabbath day: about 1700, he changed his views, was especially ordained, and became Founder, leader, pastor, and the elder of the new church, Seventh Day Baptists. Nathaniel, his name is the first on the list. It does appear that NATHANIEL BONHAM, apparently did not join the new congregation, nor any of the name, in its earlier years.

NAIVITY

The place of Nativity is not definitely fixed, but the name would indicate France and England, and the extensive use of Biblical names, classed them as English Puritans, according to many authors.

The Bonhams originated in France, and were driven by persecution from that country in the sixteenth century, because of persecution of those of Protestant faith. The early kings were favorable in the main to the Protestants, this includes, Francis I, Henry II, Henry III, and IV but even then, there occurred the "Massacre of Saint Bartholomew" one of the most horrible affairs of the kind known to history: there was a lull for a time, until every faith was ordered to depose the State Church and was forced to do so by force of arms. It is estimated that there was something like 300,000 fled from France; and it is no wonder that our brave ancestors were among them, seeking the near by refuge of England.

GEORGE BONHAM, brother William, married a Miss Bishop; and he and his brother Nicholas, are mentioned in the will of their father, which was made in the County of Essex in 1629. (This Nicholas has been confused with the Nicholas who came to America. The Nicholas who came to Amer. had not yet been born to George and Miss Bishop Bonham. B.B.M.)

Thereafter there is no mention of them in English History except they passed the port of London, on the ship Phillip, bound for Virginia, June 20th, 1635.

It is to their honor, and especial credit, that they were ambitious enough to seek a new home, in the then uncharted wilderness of America, rather than to live on the bounty of their elder brother, who by the "Law of entail" (then in force, since before 1215) which vested the rights of the estate in the eldest son, and who was supposed to look after the interests of the remaining members of the family.

This combined with the fact that Chas I ruled without Parliament from 1629 to 1640, and was very arbitrary. Lord was made Bishop of Canterbury in 1633.

During the decade beginning 1630, these two made life very uncomfortable for the "Puritans", so much so, that in 1635, the Plymouth Co. decided to transfer their Company to "New England". This intolerance of the king and his henchmen must certainly hastened their departure from the mother country. It would naturally follow that the majority thus leaving were of the Non-Conformist class, and were of those who had suffered most from their Tyrannical Rulers. And besides having a great deal to say in government, both civil and Ecclesiastical, were in accordance with their religious convictions, they may not call for the "Puritans" but they were as it was termed "Puritans" (as in the Virginia and New England) as they were called in a general sense, to all of the Puritans in the early days.

GENEALOGICAL SKETCH OF ANDREW FULTON BONHAM

ANDREW FULTON BONHAM was born June 25th, 1848, near Seven Mile Ford, in Smythe Co., Va., he was the youngest son of Joseph Park Bonham (born 1807), and Mary Gollehan Bonham (born 1806). He was raised on the Farm, and educated in the Common Schools of that day, and time, and at Fredonia, and Liberty Academies, and Jonesboro, Tenn. Male Institute.

After leaving school, he was licensed to teach, in the Public Free Schools of Smythe Co., and taught at Antioch Church, near the village of Chatham Hill.

On the 17th of Oct. 1872 he married Miss Susan Cleghon, and went to Kentucky, where he taught school during the winter of 1872-3, at Mount Clifton, Taylor Co. Ky.

In April 1873 he returned to Va., and he engaged in farming with his Father.

On the 23rd day of May 1874, his devoted wife died, aged 22 years, 4 months and 1 day. During the winter of 1874-5, he again engaged in teaching, and also in farming.

About this time the Grange Movement, engaged the attention of this part of the country, and, as always feeling a deep interest in the welfare of the farmer, he joined Liberty Grange #476, Patrons of Husbandry, organized at Fredonia Academy, Jan. 27th., 1875.

He was elected Secy. of the Organization, and served as such during its entire existence, in this part of the country, which terminated in July 1878.

He was also a Charter Member of Smythe Pomona Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, and was its Sec'y. from 1875-1879.

After the passing of the Grange here, he became a Charter Member of the Farmers Alliance, of which Organization he was made Sec'y. during its existence.

He was also a Charter Member of the Chilhowie Bee Keepers Association, organized on the 15th of Feb. 1879 and served as its clerk, during its organization.

On the 15th of Feb. 1877, he married Miss Helen Baker Mewelllyn, of Albemarle Co., Va.

She lived only a few years and died instantly from a sudden deadly stroke of apoplexy, April 28, 1881.

A few days preceeding the death of his father, which occurred on the 27th of June, 1882, he was appointed County Surveyor, of Smythe Co., to fill the vacancy in office occasioned by the resignation of Gen. Jas. S. Greer, he held this office at intervals for 13 years and 6 months.

He continued in the Surveying Profession for about 40 years.

Becoming afflicted with rheumatism, he gave up the work of surveying. He professed faith in Christ, and was baptised into the Fellowship, of the Middle Fork Baptist Church, by Rev. J. F. Harrison, Feb. 25, 1884.

In March 1886, he was chosen Treasurer of the Church, and carried the office for 12 years.

At this writing Nov. 1925, he is still a member of this church.

On the 30th day of May 1882, he married Miss Angelina Goodwin, daughter of Archibald and Elizabeth Niter Goodwin at Corcoran, Louisa Co., Va. by the Rev. L. J. Haley. By this union are 2 sons and 3 daughters, all of whom are living. One son and two daughters are married.

SKETCH OF JOSEPH PARK BONHAM
Smythe County Virginia's first Sheriff

By A.P. Bonham

The following article was written by Andrew Fulton Bonham, who was for a number of years County Surveyor for Smythe Co. and well known to our older citizens.
This is a piece of history, that is not known to the present generation.
Written for the Vidette.

JOSEPH PARK BONHAM, the subject of this sketch, was born the 3rd day of Oct. 1800.

He was the son of Hesteriah Bonham, who came from Loudoun Co. Va. to Wythe Co. in the early days of the settling up this part of the state.
His mother was Esther Scott of Wythe Co.

About the year of 1824, he married Mary, daughter of John Colleton, then of Washington Co.

To this union were born 12 children: seven daughters and five sons; of the daughters 4 died in infancy, and childhood; three lived to womanhood and married.

Of the 5 sons all lived to manhood, four of whom were married.

Two were in active service in the Civil War, one of whom fell at the battle of Gettysburg; two were detailed by the Confederate Government, for service at home. The youngest son was not of Military age.

On the 8th day of Sept. 1827, Joseph Park Bonham, was commissioned by Gov. Giles, as Justice of the Peace for Washington Co. He served in this capacity until the formation of the new County of Smythe, in the early part of the year 1832.

By an act of the Assembly, the County Court of Smythe Co., should consist of 15 Justices of the Peace commissioned by the Governor, at the first term of this court, held on Monday the 2nd day of April 1832.

15 Justices took the oath prescribed by law, and entered upon the discharge of their duties. He was one of the 15 and being officially the oldest member of the body of Magistrates, he became the first Sheriff of the new County.

Having an occupation more lucrative than that of Sheriff at that time, he farmed the office to W.S. Watson, who turned the business over to Vincent S. Morgan. Mr Morgan carried on the office as Deputy and Sheriff for several years.

The subject was Magistrate for 41 years, and during all this long time only one of his decisions was reversed. In this case he reversed his own decision on a rehearing of the case.

In his judgments and decisions, he was governed more by the Great Principle of what is just between man and man, than by the Specious Arguments of Lawyers, and doubtful technicalities of the law.

He died the 27th of June 1883, in the 79th year of his age, and is buried at Saint Clairs Bottom.

Only one child, the writer survives him.

"The remembrance of the Just,

Shall flourish when he sleeps in Dust."

Andrew Fulton Bonham.

William Bonham married Mary Bye. Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Reading, married Samuel Bye. "Register of the Hershony Presbyterian Church, Hartsville, Bucks Co., Penn. gives the marriage of Samuel Bye to Elizabeth Reading under the date of 12, Aug. 1790. The fact that the name of the bride is spelled Reading seems to mean little more than that the clerk saw fit to write it so. Professor Edwin Bye of Princeton Univ. states from family records in his possession that this Samuel Bye, the youngest son of Heschiah and Mary Ingham Bye, born 29th January, 1764, married 1790 Elizabeth Reading." Her father was John Reading, first native born governor of N.J and owner of 80,000 acres of land.

Obituary Tribute to ALEXANDER GRANT BONHAM

"The Weekly Teller" Lancaster, Wisconsin. Thursday April 7th, 1910.

In memory of Alexander Grant Bonham, born near Bowling Green, Pike Co. Missouri, Oct. 27th, 1823. Entered into Rest at Hurricane, Grant Co. Wisconsin, March 10th, 1910.

"Life! we've been long together,
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
Tis hard to part when friends are dear,
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh: a tear,
Then steal away, give little warning;
Choose thine own time; say not good-night,
But in some brighter clime, bid me good-morning."

Thus came a fitting close to the long life of Grant Co's. oldest resident, Hurricane's best beloved citizen, the venerable Grant Bonham. On Monday he was up, alert, cheerful, well as usual. Tuesday he was a little indisposed. In the afternoon he grew rapidly worse. A doctor was called. The dread pneumonia had developed. The skilled eye of the physician saw the inevitable outcome. The absent children were apprised. Disease had rapid progress. Yet in the intervals of consciousness, the sturdy nature asserted itself, and in the recognition of friends there was still the same kindness of greeting, with now and then a touch of the humor that had made him so companionable even up to the advanced age of his eighty-seventh year. At half past five o'clock Friday evening, shortly after his daughter Habel had arrived, the brave old father passed silently, peacefully to the River of Rest. At the age of ten years the subject of this sketch left Missouri with his father and came to the home of Thomas Shanley, located now in the city of Lancaster. He was the eldest of a large family. The Bonhams were prolific. The fore-fathers came from England. The earliest notice of the family is given in Burke's History of Virginia. In the list of those who came to the Colony previous to 1620 is the name Bonham. Two brothers are mentioned. Both had families. From these sprang the earliest Bonhams of the South. The descendants of this ancestry scattered far and wide, settling in various counties of many states. They seem to have been remarkably fruitful, adventurous, and sturdy. In the genealogy recently prepared by Dr. Thos. L. Smith of Chicago, there is a glowing military record, the name appearing in the wars, not only of England, but from our own Revolutionary to the Spanish American. Joseph Bonham, father of Grant, entered government land at what is now Hurricane, Wisconsin. Later the son purchased the old homestead. He married March 10th, 1851 Elizabeth Kilby. Eight children came to bless their home. Two passed on in infancy. Mr. Bonham was a thorough and practical tiller of the soil. He received ample returns for labor by keeping his lands in high state of cultivation. He loved his chosen pursuit, and from a wilderness developed one of the best farms in the county. He remained an active progressive farmer past the age of eighty. Then the old homestead was sold, and with the helpmate of more than half a century he moved into a cozy little home at the "Corners" where his days were ended, his declining years blessed with old associations too dear to his heart to be relinquished. These old pioneer Hurricane families—they were a clannish lot. Every neighbor was dear as a relation and the latch-string was always out. They loved and they strove yet more to glorify in their log cabins.

"in the clearings" than the generations that came after to enjoy the beautiful results of their industry. But histories have they made! Their industries transmitted-treasures unspeakable to their posterity. Frank Bonham was friend to every adult and every child of his acquaintance. Four years ago, he sustained a broken hip as the result of a fall. Since then he has been disabled from active labor. But his misfortune and subsequent sufferings only made him kinder to others. His general health remained good. Although he had passed the allotted time of humanity, yet he retained to his last conscious moments, a cheerfulness, an alertness of understanding, and a memory most remarkable. Mr. Bonham's early opportunities for education were limited to the log school house characteristic of those earlier days. Yet he pursued some of the higher branches in mathematics and never lost his thirst for knowledge. He kept in touch with the times through every available source and sanctioned every effort of his children toward information. He was a man of decision, candid and sincere and generous and gave liberally to charity and church. He was neither demonstrative nor ostentatious. Just a plain blunt man that loved his friends. And all knew his departure could not long be delayed, yet all were loth to let him go and all mourn for him, the old citizen, the childrens friend, into whose tiny hands he so often dropped the pennies and the dimes, the genial companion, the faithful husband, the indulgent, well-beloved parent.

The last sad rites were held at the home on the Sunday succeeding departure, where many came to pay a final tribute of respect. Rev. J. F. Morgans officiating. Old hymns were sung by life long acquaintances-Messrs W. W. Ward and Vernon Kinney and Henry Barn. Interment was made in the little "God's Acre" near the old home where slumber many kinfolks and dear neighbors. With the venerable widow, mourn the two sons, Charles of Denver, Colo. and Lemuel of Alaska, and the daughters, Nora (Mrs. Q. E. Williams), Laura (Mrs. Jerome Bishop), of Hurricane, and Lura (Mrs. W. H. Saunders) of Crestone, Colo. and Mabel (Mrs. Chas. Stephens) of Minneapolis, Minn. All were present at the funeral except the son in Alaska and Mrs. Saunders who was too ill to come. There survive two brothers, two sisters, three grand-children and one great grand-child.

How many hearts does that word, gone, fill with sorrow! When we return to the empty house, and note the vacant chair, and feel the echo of a voice silenced forever, in the echoing chambers of the heart and realize we have done the best we can do for our loved one, then do we know the intensity of the loss, and find how hard it is to take up the broken strands and fulfill again the measure of our days. But this mortal life is but a span, fraught with partings and tears for the dead, and

Beyond the verge of the blue sky
Where God's sublimest secrets lie,
We shall live again.

Mrs. Rhoda Kilby

Mrs. Rhoda Kilby was born in Virginia, Dan Co., near Richmond at a place called Danville, in 1801, and was nearly 92 years of age when she died. Her mother's name was Parsons. Her father died in Va. when Mrs. Kilby was a little girl and she afterward went to Missouri with her mother in 1818 and settled there near Ashley. The nearest landing at that time was Louisiana.

In 1831 she was married to Abraham J. Kilby. Two children, Elizabeth, now Mrs. Grant Bonham, and John J. Kilby were born in Missouri which state they left about 1835 and came up the Mississippi river in a flat boat as far as Dubuque and then came up the Mississippi and Grant rivers in a flat boat to the place where Potosi, then Snake Hollow, now stands.

Mrs. Kilby and her family stopped all night with a son of Black Hawk the famous Winnebago chief in his wigwag. The next day they came to Boice Prairie to the home of Thomas Shanley, who was married to Abraham Kilby's sister and was then living on the farm which now belongs to Mr. Kerr. The family lived with Mr. Shanley until they had their house built. Mrs. Kilby and Mrs. Joseph Bonham were the first two white settlers on who ever lived in the Hurricane timber. The woods at that time were full of Winnebago Indians, one of whom, Cut Nose John, afterwards became quite noted for having taken prominent part in the Indian depredations in Minnesota and was either killed or driven out from that state by the soldiers about 1863. After a few years, the Morrills, Harlowes, some more members of the Bonham family, a Mr. McCoombs a carpenter, Samuel Keene a blacksmith, Darius Bainbridge a hard shell Baptist preacher, who preached for these people, and also a Methodist minister named McMurtor of whom it was said that he cut his way through Potosi, came to their homes in the Hurricane woods. Jefferson Greshong moved in also shortly after this time.

Kilby and his wife commenced farming and of course the first thing to be done was to clear a piece of land. The timber was very heavy and it took a great deal of very hard work to get even a small piece of land ready for planting. Mr. Kilby had one horse, but his first team was a yoke of oxen, although he had sometimes to do the duty of an off ox.

The harness was made partly of hidey bark which he had peeled from the young hickories in the woods.

The collars for the horse were made of corn chucks plaited into flat bands and were thicker in some parts than in others. They were not such bad substitutes after all, but our harness makers would soon quit the business if this primitive kind of harness were to come into general use.

Beer, deer and turkey were very common and the old fashioned rifle could easily be made to keep the family well supplied with fresh meat.

The streams were also filled with fine fish which were easily caught when the occasion demanded. To the people of today the life brutally stretched here and which were the fortunes of early settlers of this country, seems full of hardships; but there was a freedom, an independence and a future in it that gave enjoyment and heartiness that can not be appreciated except by those who have lived it.

Mrs. Kilby lived on the old farm until Mr. John Kilby took her to his home about a year before she died. Her husband died in 1882 and the place was rented after that.

LEAH FORD BORDMAN

Mrs. Leah Ford Bordman died on the 12th of April, 1891, at the residence of her son A.G. Bordman, a prominent farmer of Hurricane.

A short notice of her death has already been published but it seems that one so well and favorably known and who has been for so many years a respected and beloved resident of Hurricane, a more lengthy notice of her death should be given.

Leah Ford Bordman was born near Knoxville, Tenn. in 1804.

Her father was a soldier of the Revolutionary War and fought in many of the battles. In 1817 her parents removed to Missouri when she was about 13 years of age.

On Sept. 19th, 1821 she was united in marriage to Joseph Bordman.

In 1834 with a family of several children they removed to Wisconsin and settled in what is now known as Hurricane, then a primitive wilderness known only to the redmen and the adventurous prospector.

Here they resided until his death in 1880. For several years after his death she kept home, but for a few years past she has lived with her children in rest and comfort.

She was the mother of 12 children, nine of whom are still living, only three reside in Grant Co. A.G. Bordman of Hurricane, John J. Bordman of Bloomington and Mrs. Wilson of Horton.

Fifty-six years of a good and worthy was spent by Mrs. Bordman in Hurricane. Born and reared in the pioneer life of Tenn. and Missouri she was well fitted for the life she came to in Wisconsin.

She was a true and perfect type of the American mother-the class which shall live in history as the mothers of the nation. Leader and gentle in her ways, charitable and generous in her nature, her life was through of it, one long summer of peace and love. She has often told the writer that the years of pioneer life in this vicinity were very happy years to her, and in her old age she loved to dwell upon the incidents of those years, so full of interest to her.

Vividly she has described to the writer, the journey from Tenn. to Mo. at the time of their removal in 1817. The voyage was made by flat-boat down the Tennessee River amidst the perils of rapids and hostile savages on the shore. Day by day they floated past wild scenes to others wilder still.

Eighty-seven years of life were granted to good "Aunt Leah" for that is the name by which we all knew her. In that long lease of years she saw her prattling babes grow to mature years and assume the duties of life.

He who in the spring time of life stood by her side and took the vows of eternal love and fealty, after long years together with her in the journey of life had laid down to rest and slept the sleep of a good man.

Alone she lingered. Free from family cares her mind dwelt upon the past till she grew young again.

The future when so soon must bring; the great change held no terrors for her. Beyond the veil which hides the mysteries of the great beyond she saw the green fields and smiling meadows, where again would come the pleasures of eternal youth.

A steadfast believer in Christian doctrines, she joined no church, yet ever professed abiding faith in future existence.

Standing upon the borders of the shadowy land she seemed to look forward with pleasant anticipations.

Her death brings to a close a long life as perfect as it is ever given mortals to know and its end is sweet.

STATUE IS UNVEILED

Dec. 18, 1933

An estimated 1500 persons witnessed the unveiling of the monument to Col. James Butler Bonham here Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Edgar Wade of Dallas, a great-great-niece of Bonham doing the unveiling.

Congressman Sam Rayburn made the dedicatory address.

The figure of Bonham cast in bronze, is mounted on a hexicon shaped granite base.

The entire monument is approximately 15 feet high but the figure of Bonham is eight feet tall.

Miss Allie Tennant of Dallas was the sculptor of the figure and Donald Nelson was the architect.

The base has the following words on two sides, "Born Feb. 20, 1807, in So. Carolina.

Studied School at So. Carolina College, 1825-27.

On the staff of governor at the time of the nullification controversy.

Practiced law at Pendleton, S.Car. and at Montgomery, Alabama.

At the call of his boyhood friend William B. Travis, he came to Texas in 1835, and engaged in the war for independence.

As an aide and messenger for Travis he was faithful unto death at the Alamo, March 6, 1836.

In the background is the Fannin County Courthouse, made possible by bonds issued by the commissioners court on Nov. 16, 1887, to the amount of $80,000.

Another bond issue of $10,000 was issued Feb. 18, 1889 to complete the building, but these sums did not include incidentals.

The structure was completed in 1889.

After a fire on Dec. 31, 1929, it was remodeled in 1930 at a cost of $38,883.69.

The first courthouse clock cost $500, the present one in 1931, $3,914.

Extracts from John Henry Bonham Letters

Regarding the Shiloh Cemetery

To Mrs. E.B. Haver

7-30-1923

The cemetery had received over 2,000 up to 1927. It was started in 1733-9. There are older cemeteries in this neighborhood. The earliest settlers here were the Ayarses, Brooks, Rowens, Bacons, Barretts, Swinnoys, and Sheppards. Later came the Pitts-Randolphs, Bonhams, Durrs, and other old families. The Sheppards, Randolphs, Ayars and Davises have far more buried here than have the Bonhams. The Bacons were doubtless here before John Fenwick received his grant of West Jersey in 1673; the Brooks, Bowen, Garrett and Swinney families came in the years 1637-1690; Ayars in 1634; the Sheppards in 1633. Going to my notes I see I am wrong about the Bacons. "In 1633 Samuel Bacon's name is found as owner of land adjoining that conveyed by the Indians to John Nichols. At the office of Secy. of State are two deeds one dated Nov. 22, 1632, in which John Adams of Hedgesfield, N.J. conveys to Samuel Bacon of Woodbridge, N.J. in the province of East Jersey, 260 acres on the Cohansey River from the Shanakanin and Stloe Indian proprietors. On these acres, now known as Bacon's Neck, but then called Bacon's Adventure, Samuel Bacon died in 1695, and his wife Martha in 1697."

To Mrs. E.B. Haver

12-12-1929

When it comes to what we know of the first George Bonham of Plymouth, Nicholas Bonham of Barnstable and Piscataway, Hezekiah Bonham of Piscataway and Hunterdon County, all of this is a common fund, taken from old records, and all our added verbiage or what ever we omit, cannot change the facts in hand. I feel sure you have enough of this original data to make you see much of this, just as I do. Take for example Mrs. McCoy's letter. Everything is told in so matter-of-fact way. "George Bonham moved to New England in 1644." The records show him already living there at that time. The assumption moved is probably drawn from inference that he sailed to "Virginia". We know that Virginia in that time included a part of New England, and we know too that sailing ships then often went far out of their course. No one knows that George Bonham lived somewhere else before he lived at Plymouth, and all our records show him there. "He came to America with his brother Nicholas on the ship 'Phillip'." This is a story that is often repeated. If they would only go to the trouble to get the whole story, how different it is. The whole passenger list of the Phillip is given. George Bonham was on the passenger list, but Nicholas Bonham's name isn't on it. (True, but I did not find any children listed, either by name or as children. Later information indicates Nicholas was only about five years of age at the time. Also it is now accepted that Nicholas was a son of George and not brother. George and Nicholas signed the oath of allegiance on the date of sailing, and it is presumed that George signed for Nicholas. It is reasonable to assume that Nicholas was on the Phillip with George. E.B. Haver 1961.) The inference is that Nicholas came at about that time, but we have no record to support. To be exact, the words "probably" and "perhaps" again and again. He cannot be honest without stating his inference as such. "His only son was Hezekiah Bonham." No genealogist would say that. It is known that he had another son Samuel, who died in 1682; and it is claimed he had a son Nicholas, though his name does not appear in New Jersey records. "Our line is through the first wife who was Mary Dunn." How many of us would like to say that, and have Mary Dunn for our ancestor? It has always seemed as though she belonged to our branch of the family as the Dunns and the Bonhams both came to Shiloh in an early day. But the Piscataway records show plainly that Heseekiah's wife died after she had given birth to one son Samuel and three daughters. ( Mary Dunn died 11-16-1699. E.B.Hazie)

I talked with a prominent member of the N.J.Historical Society who lives at Flemington, county seat of Hunterdon Co., who said that the Bonhams there knew little of, nor seemed to be interested in, their family history. If someone living there had a passion to know the history of the family I doubt not he could learn a great deal. Their interesting ancestor, Uriah Bonham, doubtless one of the sons of Heseekiah, died very aged in 1809. He married Nov. 5, 1751, Anchor Fox. In his will he mentioned 5 grandsons and 5 granddaughters. All but one of the grandsons were Uriahs, and all five of the granddaughters were Anchors, which shows something for the respect that his five children had for their parents. His son Zedekiah had the consummate nerve to call his son Andrew rather than Uriah. I don't see how some of the family can help digging up their history which is so well preserved for them.

Seems a certain Ella Wall was making a sale of her household goods and I decided to go to it. Went the day before to look things over. Learned she was returning to Canada. I asked her what her maiden name was and you could have pushed me over with a feather when she said "Bonham". Now it is remarkable that I thought to go to this sale which is something I seldom do, haven't been to another for several years; also unusual that I should ask her her name before marriage; and strange that though she lived only five miles from me and she got her mail from my carrier on R. 3, Bridgeton; and also that her brother Alec Bonham came here from Canada and bought a farm and lived for years only three miles from here at Jericho, and on original Bonham stamping ground of generations ago. The brother returned to Canada and has been dead for some years. Mrs. Wall had come here many years ago with her husband for his health. He has been dead for several years and now she is going to live with an uncle. She told me of a published account of her ancestors in Canada. ( Canada Archives report they do not have nor do they know of any such record. E.B.Hazie 10-25-1961.) She also told me of an aged Mrs. Mary Bonham in Bridgeton who had some early history of the Bonhams. I visited this old lady, spry and living alone, and even older than my mother, but she didn't seem to know anything about this history. Her grandson also said she had some Bonham history. ( J.H.B.'s. experience is typical of what is encountered in genealogical research. E.B.Hazie.)

Under date of July 27, 1942, she Ella Wall writes; You will think I am a long time in sending you the history of Elam Bonham, my grandfather. I have been quite poorly since I came back to Canada and have not been able to get around to get the history of the Bonhams living in St. George. If I succeed in getting same or even address I will forward it on to you.

ILLUSTRATED 1883 (Publication not known)

Elam Bonham, retired farmer, Brantford, was born near Hamilton, in 1819. His father Jeriah Bonham, was born in Pennsylvania, and now at the age of 95 years, lives with his son Elam in this county. He came to Canada before the war in 1812, and served through the war, being now one of the oldest pensioners. His wife was Mary White, who died in Canada in 1848, leaving Elam and Amelia, who is now the wife of Rev. William Willoughby.

In 1823 Jeriah and family came to Canada, (error, see note below), settling near St. George, there he cleared his farm from dense forest. Elam Bonham, since a boy of three years, has watched the growth of this section from a bush to its present well developed condition. He married Elisabeth Dauselaugh, of German descent. Mr. Bonham soon after marriage, settled near Brantford, where he has since lived, and where he now owns 115 acres and a lot of 12 acres. Mr. Bonham belongs to the Methodist Church, and is the father of six children; David and Dinah, deceased; Harriet, Peter, Mary and Jeriah.

NOTE;

There must be an error in the date above, 1823, as it does not agree with what goes before. Maybe it should have read "In 1823 Jeriah and his family settled near St. George, Canada, etc."

I got considerable data from Mrs. Wall on her immediate family while she was here. I have looked everywhere for the Ella Wall notes but do not find them.

Dated 3-30-1930

Edward Fuller, No. 11, of the Mayflower Co., and wife, unable to withstand the vigorous weather of the winter of 1620-21, died a short time after landing. Their son Samuel, born in England in 1612, and a grandson of Robert Fuller, died at Barnstable, Mass., Oct. 31, 1633, accompanied his parents on the Mayflower. (He was the last survivor of the signers of the Mayflower Compact. J.E.B.)

He was brought up by his uncle Dr. Samuel Fuller, and was administrator of the doctor's estate. He was made a freeman of the Plymouth Colony. He removed to Scituate in the Plymouth Colony, and later went to live at Barnstable, Mass. He was married by Captain Miles Standish at Mr. Guthworth's house in Scituate, Mass., April 13, 1635. (April 8, 1635, Mayflower Descendants and Marriages J.E.B.) to Jane Lathrop, daughter of Rev. John Lathrop. Jane was baptised Sept. 29, 1614 at Edgortly, (Ederton?), County of Kent, England. She died between the dates of 1633 and 1632.

They had 3 children (Mayflower Descendants give nine J.E.B.) of which Hannah, the oldest, was born at Scituate, Mass., 1635. She married Jan. 1, 1658/9 at Barnstable, Mass., Nicholas Bonham of that place. Nicholas Bonham is No. 92 on the list of men who married daughters of Mayflower descendants.

The Bonham family of England, is ancient in England and of Norman descent. (The Bonume, J.E.B.) The name is probably derived from "bon" meaning "good", and "homme" meaning "man". (The Bonhommes were much later than the Bonums and were French protestants from Valencee.

The names came to be used interchangeably, but we are probably descended from the Bonhommes, J.E.B.) Nicholas was born in England, and came to America some time before his marriage in 1639. (He is thought to have come about the time George Bonham crossed in 1635.)

According to Haver he was probably a brother of George.

He had four children, Hannah, Mary, and Sarah, born in Mass. (Barnstable records give the dates of their births. J.H.B.) and Hezekiah who was probably born in New Jersey. (It is also probable that his fourth daughter, Elizabeth, was born at Barnstable in or about 1665, and before the son Hezekiah, and others who were born in New Jersey. J.H.B.)

Will of Nicholas Bonham. Wife Hannah and son Hezekiah, executors.

(He named overseers as his son was a minor.) Land and personal property in Piscataway Twp., Middlesex County, N.J. Will proved Dec. 18, 1684. Hezekiah Bonham, (Not the Hezekiah mentioned above, son of Nicholas) born in N.J., married Mary Bonham, March 17, 1732.

Son Zachariah Bonham, was born to them in N.J. in 1763. There were other children. Moved to Hampshire Co. Virginia, now W.Va., in 1790.

Zachariah Bonham, my grandfather, born in N.J. in 1763, married Sophia Johnson and had five children, Amos, Robert, Hezekiah, Elizabeth and Johnson. Married second wife, Susanna Hooper of Westmoreland Co. Pa. about 1818 or 1819. They had three children, Mary, my mother, Rebecca and Sarah. Copied by J.H.B. 2-16-1930 By Dr. J.D. Fleming.

TO THE CHILDREN OF WINFIELD SCOTT BONHAM

2-6-1933

By John H. Bonham

The story "Three Girls of Swansea" which appeared in the Sabbath Recorder, Jan. 6 and Jan. 13, 1930, has a particular meaning to you.

Patience Ayars, a great-granddaughter of Robert Ayars and Hester (Ester) Bowen, became the wife of our first Bonham ancestor in Shiloh, Zachariah Bonham, who was my grandfather John S. Bonham's great-grandfather.

This Patience Ayars was the daughter of Caleb Ayars, Jr. and Patience Brooks. And this Patience Brooks was the daughter of Rev. Timothy Brooks of our story and Hannah Bowen, his wife. Patience Ayars father, Caleb Ayars Jr., was the son of Isaac Ayars and Hannah Barrett. Isaac Ayars was the son of the first Robert Ayars and Ester Bowen, his wife.

John T. Davis, our great-grandfather, was a great grandson of Jonathan Davis, the first pastor of the church at Shiloh. His parents were Ebenezer Davis, farmer and surveyor, and Margaret Tomlinson, daughter of Lt. James Tomlinson and Barbara Brown. Ebenezer was the son of Elnathan Davis, noted surveyor, and Susanna Bond, and Elnathan was the son of Rev. Jonathan Davis, first pastor as before mentioned.

Rev. Jonathan was the son of Elnathan Davis of Trenton, Surveyor General of New Jersey.

Our grandmother Bonham was Margaret Tomlinson Davis, daughter of John t. Davis and Beulah Davis. Beulah Davis was the granddaughter of Elder Jonathan Davis, second pastor of the Shiloh Church.

This Jonathan Davis came from Delaware, and is called the founder of Newark Academy, now the Delaware State College. His father was Rev. David Davis of the old Welch Tract Baptist Church in Delaware.

His mother was Rachel Thomas, daughter of Rev. Elisha Thomas, second pastor of the Welch Tract Church. Beulah Davis, John T. Davis' wife, the daughter of Jonathan Davis, farmer and Anni Davis, second pastor before mentioned, and Margaret Bond, his wife.

THE SOUTHWEST CORNER

From Roanoke laws dated

While the major part of the pioneers who settled in Southwest Virginia were of Scotch Irish and German descent there was among them a considerable number of other blood strains--English, pure Scotch, pure Irish, Welsh and French. A fairly large proportion of the English breed among the first settlers came from New England, either directly or from other colonies whither their New England ancestors had gone in former generations. At least one prominent and widely diffused Southwest Virginia family connection not only originated in New England but has among its ancestors one who "really and truly" came over on the Mayflower. This is the Bonham family, with many connections in many Southwest Virginia counties, in other sections of Virginia, and scattered through many other states. I am indebted to Hugh G. Bonham of Pulaski for a very elaborate and remarkably complete genealogical table and a copy of his manuscript history of the Bonhams of America, which he calls the "The Bonham Odyssey". It makes interesting reading.

From this paper it appears that all of the Bonhams in Virginia descend from one Nicholas Bonham, who probably arrived in Massachusetts in 1635 from England on the same ship with his brother George. There is a record which says; "George Bonham, 31, is registered as passing from the port of London 20 June 1635 on the boat Phillip to Virginia," and there is presumptive evidence that his brother Nicholas, came over on the same boat at the same time.

There is record of the marriage in New England of Nicholas Bonham and Hannah Fuller on Jan. 1, 1659. Hannah was the daughter of Samuel Fuller who was the ancestor that was among the original Mayflower passengers. He was a very small boy when he participated in that historic voyage, lived to be an old man and was one of the last survivors of the Mayflower company. His father and mother both perished in the first terrible New England winter that killed off so many Mayflower ancestors, some of whom it is feared left no descendants, and young Samuel was reared by an uncle who survived the perils of that winter. In the year 1667 Nicholas and Hannah Fuller Bonham left Mass. because of the prevailing religious intolerance in that colony and moved with their four daughters to New Jersey, where two more daughters and three sons were born to them. One of these three sons was Hezekiah Bonham, known in Virginia branch of the families "the old Bonham of all."

The manuscript history says; "There is a tradition in the Virginia branch of the family that 'the Old Bonham of all' was an Episcopal minister and that he had twelve sons to whom he gave Biblical names ending in 'iah'. This does not quite check with recently found data, for he was first a Baptist and later a Seventh Day Adventist." He had two wives and nineteen children, three daughters and one son by his first wife and one daughter and fourteen sons by his second. He did give Biblical names to all of his fifteen sons, thirteen of them ending in "iah". The names of the sons were; Samuel, Hezekiah, Nehemiah, Zedekiah, Amariah, Malakiah, Josiah, Jeroniah, Ephraim, Isaiah, Zephaniah, and Uriah. As these children reached maturity they began to move and now after two hundred and fifty years we find their descendants still in New Jersey and also in New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Wisconsin and California.

The Southwest Virginia Bonhams are descendants of Hezekiah Jr., who went to Maryland and both he and his brother moved later to have been ministers, perhaps Episcopal ministers, serving in that colony and in Northern Virginia. He like his father gave Biblical names to his sons, but he did not have so many sons and he did not show such partiality to names ending in "iah". His sons were Joseph, Jacob, Aaron, Moses, Samuel and Daniel.

Moses Bonham served in the Revolution as a Ranger on the Frontier and as a member of the Maryland Light Dragoons. He is said to have died at Yorktown in 1783 while starting on an expedition to Georgia led by Gen. Anthony Wayne. He married Rebecca Park and they had five children and lived in Loudoun Co. Va. About 1795 his widow, Rebecca Park Bonham moved with her family to Rye Valley, then in Wythe county, now in Smyth, where some of their descendants now live.

"They came with some other Bonhams who came from New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, settled in Rye Valley for a while and later moved to Tennessee and farther west. Among those coming with widow Rebecca were; a Joseph Bonham, his wife Naomi, and family; a Nehemiah, wife Betsy Williams, and family; a Benjamin, wife Oney, and two sons, Benjamin Jr. and Martin L., and a younger Nehemiah, born in Loudoun County, Virginia, in 1770."

"Joseph and Naomi were ancestors of the branch that has lived in and near Marion for many years. Nehemiah Sr., lived for a time in Grayson Co., and some of his children were born there. He later moved to Tennessee, and still later to Ohio."

More about the Bonhams of Southwest Virginia in later Southwest Corners. Among other well known Southwest Virginia families whose forebears came originally from New England may be mentioned the Hulls, Coles, Bishops, Tisons, and Lincolns, the first four as examples of early pioneer settlers and the last of those who came later, about the middle of the last century.

"I ALMOST DID FLY"

Time magazine 1-22-1951

When six-year-old Dickie Bonham began reading Mighty Mickey Mouse comic books a few months ago, he was overwhelmed by a pulse-stirring daydream: he began imagining himself flying through the air in red tights, a long-sleeved yellow pull-over and a flowing cape. He was a frail asthmatic child, but doggedly determined; he hurried from his room in the Bonham home in Highland Park, Calif. and asked his mother if he could learn to spread his arms and fly.

Gently she told him that God did not want humans to fly that way; that He had given birds wings to fly, but had given man a big brain so he could make airplanes. Dickie listened silently. His father was an engineer at Northrop Aircraft Inc., and airplanes seemed commonplace to the boy. A few weeks later he told his mother that he could remember flying with his own two arms when he was "awfully young". She tried to explain that it must have been just a dream.

Last week one of Dickie's friends asked him to play Indian. He agreed. But at the last minute he decided to try a different game. He put on a yellow sweat shirt, tied a bath towel around his neck for a cape. The boys headed for a 25-foot embankment. Dickie walked back from the brink, turned and ran as hard as he could, and jumped out into the air. He fell on his stomach. He lay on the ground, scratched and dirty, and unable to get up. His mother, summoned by his playmate, hurried him to a doctor; a few minutes later Dickie was being rushed to the Glendale Community Hospital. His spleen was ruptured and he had other internal injuries. He told his mother "I really almost did fly, mother. I took off my arms." Four days after the accident Dickie died.

TRAVELS TO TRACE ALL BONHAMS

He who studies genealogy spends time in travel and develops a new love and understanding of this, his native land.

Much more is said by S.J. Bonham, '21, superintendent of schools for Miles, Ohio, as he has completed and published the BONHAM GENEALOGY.

Begun in 1923 when he and his wife were in a class of eugenics in Indiana University, the project was hard to complete, because Bonhams are being born in many places. S.J.B. had to use pen and ink to include the birth of a grandson Dec. 24.

On vacation in autumn the Bonhams will visit Vicksburg, Miss. where S.J.'s grandfather's uncle was buried during the siege of Vicksburg.

"We wish to visit the Alamo in Texas where my eighth cousin, James Butler Bonham, was killed along with David Crockett, Col. Travis and other heroes. Bonham, Tex. was named in his honor. We wish to visit Bonhamtown, N.J., to get some pictures of the village established about 1668 by our direct ancestor," writes the author.

S.J.'s book of 102 pages is a great service to citizens interested in Bonhams and in family names. (In the tax records of Virginia, the collector's spelling of the name is recorded variously; Bonam, Bonum, Bonahan, Bonhom, Bonem, Bonhomme and Bonham.)

S.J. indicates that the Bonham family "recorded pedigree and arms during the Heraldic Visitations of Essex (England) in 1634. The arms of the family were; gules, a chevron wavy between three crosses, a pale-fitch argent. The cross is for the journey to the Holy Land. The mermaid is for perilous adventures at sea."

Other Bonhams in the alumni files here are David B. Bonham, '34N. also a nephew of S.J., and also originally of Mulberry, Ind., and Anne Bonham '45, who is now Mrs. Herbert L. Catron in her native town of Chilhowie Virginia.

CHANCES ARE GOOD THAT YOU ARE DESCENDANT OF ENGLISH KING

By Mary Margaret McBride

Ancestor-hunting is a popular sport in this country, although right now things are quieting down a bit in the genealogical room of the New York Public Library where it is not unusual for the morgue-like stillness to be shattered by a "Whee-ee-ee!" which is greeted by understanding looks by other frequenters. It just means that someone has bagged an ancestor.

Ancestor-hunting reaches its peak around February-maybe because all of the patriotic holidays- and then starts dropping off, summer is too hot for it.

There are many rewards in ancestor-trapping beyond the thrill of the chase. If your quarry turns out to have had a military career, he may get you into a patriotic society or be good for a dressy coat of arms, to use on stationary or (not much any more) automobile doors.

One warning-to prevent just anybody from using your coat of arms, you should register it as a trade-mark in the U.S. Patent Office. But you had better study up on heraldry before you go to so much trouble and expense. It seems that in England and France between the First and Second Crusades, coats of arms were invented not as a sign of nobility, but as a means of identification in battle. When the boys got all dressed up in their armor, with the visors down, their own best friends couldn't recognize them. So they started wearing embroidered insignia, and that is the coat of arms.

An item that tickles me is that one of the commonest commodities in this country is a drop or two of royal blood, especially if you are of British descent. For example, there are 26 generations between William the Conqueror and me, and there must be at least 7,000,000 of his direct

This article has nothing whatever to do with Bonham genealogy, but it gives us a good idea of the problems which confronted our forefathers. It is of especial interest to note that Western Pennsylvania was then considered the frontier. This original paper in hands of E.B.Hazle.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF WEFENORELAND AND ALLEGHENY COUNTIES.

Fellow citizens;

I am sorry to hear that some of you are leaving the frontiers, and moving, you scarcely know where, because we have reason to suspect the fidelity of the Six Nations Indians, our allies. Perhaps our suspicions are groundless; and if they are not, let us hold the pledged faith of our country, in our treaties, sacred, and never violate it with sagages, nor any human race. But, instead of leaving the frontiers, or giving way to unnecessary fears, let us instantaneously repair our guns, provide a quantity of powder and lead, pray to God for the pardon of all our sins, and preparation for eternity, and hold ourselves ready for defence in a moments warning-- and as soon as we have uncontrovertible evidence, that the Six Nations have broken the treaty, and joined our enemies, let us rendezvous immediately, under the proper officers, lay our hands on our swords, and putting our trust in the avenger of injured innocence, let us rush into their country, and the god of armies will give us success. If they become enemies, as they our neighbors, and well provided with arms and ammunition, if we cannot carry the war into their country, we are undone.

I hope men of property and feeling in the interior parts of the country, will assist the poorest of their brethren on the frontiers with powder and lead, and I am of the opinion it would be highly expedient, in our present alarming circumstances, to have a few men raised as spies and supported by a general contribution, until our government, which I know will help us, can have time to make proper arrangements for our defence. Let us support the frontiers, for if they once give up, the country is lost, and we may go over the mountains as soon as we please.

The situation of the poor people on the frontiers is truly distressing. These two years past prevented in a great measure from attending to their farms, and the only source of support to their families; and now, when they expected peace with the return of the spring, we are again exposed to the fearful expectations of all the dreadful consequences of savage barbarity.

O ye sons of peace, who are far distant from the horrid scene, can you blame us for shedding blood in our own defence, would you have us callous to the piercing cries of our dear wives and innocent babes, murdered before our eyes. O ye tender mothers, citizens of Columbia, whether inhabiting eastern or midland States, when you clasp your charming offspring to your maternal bosom, and when your smiling infants entwine their little arms around your neck, and steal a kiss, and with it their mummy's heart, then think what pangs mothers with us must feel, when their tender babes are snatched from their bosom by cruel, and unrelenting savages, who take them by the heels and beat their brains out against the wall--and although your feeble hands cannot afford us assistance, let the briny symptoms of sympathetic weep, flow down your sorrowful cheeks, while your tongues are employed in supplicating the throne of grace, on our behalf.

To venerable legislators of the Columbia republic, your lenient and well intended schemes, to conciliate the savages, have only increased their thirst for blood; and if your wisdom does not lead you to more efficient measures, we are undone.

To legislators of Pennsylvania, fathers of your country, we, your children once more look up to you for protection, we tremble for fear of the Six Nations, and look to you for assistance.

It may be said, that the reason why I am so forward in the cause of the frontiers, is because my property and congregations are there-- True, all of the property I have in the universe, is on the frontiers, but that property would not amount to fifty pounds; and as to my congregations, I can at any time obtain a large salary out of reach of danger to myself and family, but I cannot leave my poor flock, in the day of their distress; with me they have the courts or the prince of peace, where I have explained the doctrines, and urged the practice of genuine religion, as including our duty to God and man; and with them I'll tread the plains of death, in defensive war.

I have no treasure to spend in defence of my people, but my heart's blood, and that shall flow if necessity requires.

Now, my dear fellow-citizens, let us never rest until we obtain through the blood of Jesus; and join with me in a campaign against vice and immorality, and the savage tribes of our own corrupt inclinations, and if the Indians break in upon us, according to our fears, I will take my sword in the one hand, and my bible in the other, and join with you in carrying a campaign against them, and I hope the Lord will be with us.

PROCLAMATION

Whereas I have received certain information, that a number of disorderly, ill-disposed Persons are about to collect themselves together with an intention to go into Upper Cherokee towns, on the Tennessee, to destroy the same, and kill the inhabitants thereof, regardless of law human and divine, and subversive of the peace and order of government.

Now I, the said William Blount, Governor in and over the said territory, do hereby command and require the above described persons, and every of them, immediately to desist from such intention, and to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes, within one hour after the moment of the promulgation of this proclamation: And I do hereby command them, and every of them, not to go within the limits of the country guaranteed to the said Cherokees by the treaty of Holston, which is in full force and use, as they will answer to the contrary at their peril; and I do command all officers, civil and military, to exercise and exert that authority, which by law they are vested, and prevent so daring a violation of the law, and of the existing treaty with the Cherokee nation.

Given under my hand and seal, at Knoxville, in the said territory, this 25th day of January, 1793.

EDWARD FULLER---SAMUEL FULLER---DR. SAMUEL FULLER

More than a million descendants of the Mayflower, it is estimated, are now living, 305 years after the historic ship made her memorable voyage from Southampton, England, to Plymouth, Mass., at that time a wilderness haven inhabited by savage beasts and men.

These million or more descendants of the year 1925 are scattered throughout the Union, and Canada. Comparatively few have preserved the record of descent through ten or more generations.

There were 104 passengers on the Mayflower of whom 25 became heads of families. Two of these left only a daughter each who married into other names of these 23 men are as follows:

The Massachusetts Mayflower Society has published the complete list of all the descendants of the Mayflower for two generations.

This is an official list. The California Society of the Mayflower has continued the list for four generations. This list, which is not entirely complete, but which will be some time in the future, contains the names of 1609 men who in four generations married daughters of descendants of the Mayflower.

In the list of the third generation, we find the name NICHOLAS BONHAM Number 92, and after his name the number 11, which means that the said Nicholas Bonham married a granddaughter (third generation) of Edward Fuller, whose name is number 11 in the first generation and who was the eleventh passenger to sign the "Mayflower Pact" in the cabin of the ship.

The records and genealogies of the Fullers are given below.

DR. SAMUEL FULLER

Samuel Fuller, Plymouth 1626, one of the most valuable pilgrims of the Mayflower, and the first physician to settle in our country, was born in England. He was one of the Pilgrims who left England on account of religious persecution, and went to Holland, from which place he embarked on the Mayflower for America, after first stopping at Southampton, England, to receive others of their faith. Dr. Samuel had been a deacon at Leyden for eight years, though his wife Bridget, who came to America in 1623 on the ship "Ann" with a child that I think lived not long, may have been married but a short time before he left Holland. He brought with him a servant, William Batten, a youth who died before reaching the coast.

He had two children, Samuel and Mercy born here, both after May 22, 1627 and both living in 1650. Dr. Samuel died in 1633.

His will was written July 30th of that year, and proved in the following October. His wife Bridget lived until 1664.

EDWARD FULLER

Edward Fuller, Plymouth, brother of the famous Dr. Samuel Fuller, came with him in the Mayflower 1620, bringing his wife Ann and son Samuel leaving another son Mathew on the other side, Mathew being the elder. As will be seen later, he and his wife died the next year but his son Samuel survived the hardships of that terrible winter.

Edward Fuller was the son of Robert Fuller and was born Oct. 4, 1575 in the Parish of Rendenhall, County Norfolk, England. His death occurred between Jan. 11th and April 10th, 1621. His name is the 11th on the compact signed in the cabin of the Mayflower just before landing on Cape Cod Nov. 1620. The inclemency of the weather, the privations they suffered and the changed conditions under which they were brought, deprived Edward Fuller of his life a few months after he just saw the inhospitable shores of New England. Governor Bradford says: "Edward Fuller and his wife died soon after they came on shore. They left the child, Samuel."

- 8th child Child who was born Feb. 3, 1678, died in Yarmouth.

THREE GIRLS OF SWANSEA

By John Henry Bonham

This story should be of special interest to descendants of the Zachariah Bonham line of New Jersey.

This is the true story of three girls who lived more than two hundred years ago, passed from this life, and have been quite forgotten.

At the time of their girlhood this country was new, life was a struggle for existence, homes were planted in the forests. Their settlements were the first frontiers, and Indians were still upon the land.

Not very much concerning the lives of its women has that day saved for us. Few markers pointed out the graves of those who lived and died in those early days, save the flowers placed there by their surviving friends. Thus it is that the story of those three girls, so long forgotten, has waited until now to be told. (1929)

Hester, Hannah and Elizabeth, daughters all of them of those early pioneers who came over with the Baptist company of John Miles.

They had come from Wales, and located in the Massachusetts colony, naming their settlement Swansea after their home across the sea.

It was in 1662. Houses went up to the sound of busy axe and hammer, and there was soon a happy village and country life in this new territory. All went well with the settlers for several years, then suddenly and without warning, as the Swansea villagers were going home from church on the Sabbath day, ambushed Indians fell upon them, murdering several of their number. This was the beginning of the terrible King Phillip's War in the New England colonies. The men folk of the colonists had to take up arms, while the women and children were moved back to protected towns. The Swansea colonists fled from their homes and the place was abandoned.

ROBERT AYARS OF ENGLAND

And so it happens that our first heroine, Hester Bowen, had gone to live among friends in Rhode Island. It was while there that she met a young man named Robert Ayars. He had left England, a lad fourteen years old, in 1664; and had made the voyage on the same vessel with Stephen Mumford, a missionary to America. They became friends during the long journey across, which in those times took several weeks, and was persuaded to become a member of the society of Seventh Day Baptists.

There must have been something kindred in this bright young girl, Hester Bowen, and the fine young Englishman, which drew them together.

And so the two were wed, and made their home in Hopkinton, Rhode Island. And what a happy home! There were soon boys and girls; but the father and mother were equal to the task of raising fine children, and to that of making money at the same time.

TIMOTHY BROOKS OF SWANSEA

The Indian war had broken out in the year 1675. It took two years of hard fighting to put down the savages. The settlers then went back to their homes. Among those returning to Swansea was a sober youth, Timothy Brooks by name. His father Timothy Brooks Sr., had fought the Indians in the war just over, and was appointed a captain of the colonial soldiers. The lad's grandfather was a Scotchman, Harry Brooks, and had landed in Boston in the year it was founded, 1630.

The young Timothy Brooks, spite of his mother's training, on the rough frontier, was refined at heart, a noble lad with high ideals and a desire to do the right. He did not come back in Swansea long when he ran across his boyhood friend, Hannah Bowen, who had also returned with her folks. Hester Bowen, already mentioned and now married, had not returned, but was with her husband in Rhode Island. So her was Hannah Bowen, growing up into a beautiful young woman. A few years passed and Timothy Brooks had become a man. They were sweethearts yet, so he asked her the age-old question, and received the time-honored answer, "yes". So these two, Timothy Brooks Jr. and our second heroine, Hannah Bowen, were wed. They too lived happily thereafter.

OPPRESSION IN MASSACHUSETTS

But things had changed in Swansea. Before the Indian war, Swansea was a peaceful neighborhood and had prospered. Impoverished now by the conflict, having lost almost everything, they set out to rebuild their homes and fortunes. Like a demon set loose among them, a narrow, wicked intolerance sprung up in the colonies. Those through strength of numbers or political power could do so, oppressed those who did not accept their way of thinking.

To be a Puritan had meant to be virtuous and tolerant of one's neighbors; but now the Puritans had become intolerant and oppressive that the word "puritanical" took on an unsavory meaning.

During this time other sects, particularly Baptists and Quakers, were continually harassed and punished with imprisonment, heavy fines, brutal public whippings, disfranchisement, and exile. What an illusion to those who had come to these shores expecting to find a land of liberty, and to be unmolested and happy! The same narrow intolerance which had driven this band of men and women from their homes in Wales twenty-five years before was now driving them to seek some place where they would be free from the terror of their enemies.

Roger Williams and many of his Baptist friends had sought a haven of safety from their oppressive neighbors in the Massachusetts and Connecticut colonies by settling in the Rhode Island country. The colonies overstepped their boundaries to arrest Rhode Island citizens, hale them into their courts, and find, imprison, and horse-whip them.

The courage with which these men suffered punishment at the hands of their enemies was truly wonderful. Never were men and women braver in defense of their beliefs and ideals.

AYARS MIGRATES TO NEW JERSEY

So it happened that our first heroine, Hester Bowen, who was now the wife of Robert Ayars, and living in Hopkinton, Rhode Island, understood all too well what her friends and kinsfolk were suffering back in Swansea, Massachusetts. They had seen Tobias Saunders and Robert Burdick, members of their Seventh Day Baptist church at Newport, dragged off by Massachusetts authorities, locked in jail in Boston, fined forty pounds apiece; while the Connecticut authorities had imprisoned Elder John Crandall and Joseph Clark, also members of their society, in the Hartford jail. The year of grace 1684 rolled around.

Robert and Hester decided to visit her folks in Swansea. A round table discussion was held to know what to do. For twenty years, or ever since the Dutch had lost their possessions in America to the English, the New Jersey colony had invited settlers from other colonies and from European countries to locate on her soil. The proprietors of the colony published a constitution in 1684 called "Propositions and Agreements" which provided that "the people shall be secure in the enjoyment of property; that full toleration in religion shall be allowed.

No person shall be in any way molested or punished, or called into question for any difference of opinion or practice in matters of religion, but all shall freely and fully enjoy their judgment and consciences in matters of religious faith."

From 1634 to the date of this reaction in Sweden, a stream of colonists had been pouring from New England into New Jersey.

Robert Ayars was a man of action, and his wife, Hester, loved her people and wished that they might help them. So they then and there decided to find out about this New Jersey colony.

Returning to Hopkinton and settling up his affairs, they packed up bag and baggage, and bidding farewell to a large circle of Newport and Hopkinton friends, set out on a sailing vessel for Salem in West Jersey.

FENWICK'S COLONY

Nine years before this time, or in 1673, John Fenwick had settled a colony at Salem, the first English settlement in West Jersey.

He had purchased this tract, which includes the present Salem and Cumberland counties, to provide refuge for his friends, the persecuted Quakers. He saw to it that the Indian owners of the land were paid in full and satisfied before any land was taken.

Fenwick's life was full of trials, and his death came in 1683, the year before Robert Ayars went to look over Fenwick's territory.

Fenwick had laid out a town on the Cohamsey River which was named Greenwich. The broad acres about this beautiful river impressed Robert and Hester Ayars, and they saw how the answer to their prayer, a safe retreat for their persecuted friends. Two hundred acres was bought across the river from Greenwich and a home was built thereon.

Later another tract of six hundred acres was added. Hester hastened a letter to Hannah. It went by boat and was some time in arriving back in the old home town. But when the letter reached Hannah it was not long until the place was all agog with excitement. The news of this new country sounded almost too good to be true. Yet they could depend on Hester for the truth. It had to be true!

They talked in the village streets, they debated in the stores at night, they pondered it while going home from church on the Sabbath.

Surely this was a promised land land to sufferers in a wilderness of misfortune.

CONCESSIONS AND AGREEMENTS

The original plan of the government of West Jersey was devised by William Penn, and published March 3, 1676. Like the constitution of 1664 it was known as "The Concessions and Agreements", and in respect to the security of liberty was in advance of all governments then existing. To quote Sypher's History of New Jersey, 1869. "This constitution declared that no man or number of men on earth had power or authority to rule over men's consciences in religious matters; and that no person or persons within the Province should be in any wise called into question or punished, in person, estate, or privilege, on account of opinion, judgment, faith or worship toward God in matters of religion.

That no proprietor or inhabitant of the Province should be deprived or condemned of life, limb, liberty or estate, without due trial and judgment passed by twelve good and lawful men of the neighborhood. That no person should be arrested or imprisoned, except in criminal and treasonable cases, until personal reasons, setting forth the cause, should have been given, and sufficient time allowed to make answer; that

That no person should be arrested or imprisoned, except in criminal and treasonable cases, until personal reasons, setting forth the cause, should have been given, and sufficient time allowed to make answer; that no man should be imprisoned for debt if he had neither goods or property wherewith to pay. That all the inhabitants of the Province should have the right to attend court and be present at the proceedings, 'to the end that justice may not be done in a corner, nor in any covert manner, it being intended and resolved, by the help of the Lord and by those concessions and fundamentals, that all and every person and persons inhabiting this province shall, as far as in us lies, be free from oppression and slavery."

The vanguard of the immigrants from the Swensen settlement in Massachusetts at what was then known as the Cohamsey country in West Jersey in 1687. All of Fenwick's land was then known as Salem county, Cumberland county not having been cut off from it until 1748.

The Cohamsey country where the newcomers located was west of the Cohamsey river, a navigable tidewater stream in the Cumberland portion of old Salem county. The new arrivals were fortunate in finding good Quaker folk already living there for neighbors. Baptists too, who came from Tipperary, Ireland, had preceded them by two or three years. Among the Irish people were David Sheppard, Thomas Abbott and William Button. Then two other Sheppard brothers, Thomas and John arrived.

Obediah Holmes' poor old father, the Rev. Obediah Holmes, had been dragged from Newport, Rhode Island to Boston, and there unmercifully horsewhipped for his Baptist opinions. Our new colonists also found Indians living here, but they remained friendly among their white neighbors.

THE TIMOTHY BROOKS COMPANY

In 1690 the main body of the immigrants from Swensen made the journey to New Jersey. It was a great undertaking, bringing horse, cattle, wagons, household goods, and farming implements. They were a slow moving company, much of the way being well high trackless, and with many an unbridged stream to ford. There were hazards on the journey; unfriendly territory to pass; food, water, and shelter to secure.

Then too, there was discipline to maintain. These in the company had to be neighborly and law-abiding during the months upon the road.

In view of these things they had appointed young Timothy Brooks as the captain of their company, and for this reason that large body of immigrants became known as the Timothy Brooks' Company.

We can imagine the well merited pride of our second heroine, Hannah Bowen, in the elevation of her young husband, to whom she had been married only five years, that is since 1685.

Now our trio of Swensen girls had all moved to the Cohamsey country due to the untiring love of Hester, the eldest. Here at last they found peace, and they added zest to their lives by working to develop a fine community. There were the Brookses, Larretts, Lawens and Swinnys who had come from Swensen, all of them large family groups which included grand parents, sons and daughters, and grandchildren. There was the family of Robert Ayers, still located on the east of the river.

Of our three girls the youthful Elizabeth Bowen was still unmarried; but something was in the wind, something which had its beginning back in old Swensen. Therefore the next character:

ELDER JONATHAN BATES OF HARTON

Three brothers, John, Jonathan, and William Bates came over to America from Wales in 1649. They later joined the settlement of Rev. John Wilson's Company in Wrentham, Massachusetts. In the beginning of the years of King Philip's War, 1675, Jonathan Davis Jr., son of Jonathan Davis Sr., was born. When the Timothy Brooks' family migrated to New Jersey, or before, the Davis families turned to Long Island and settled there. Young Jonathan developed into a tall, broad-shouldered youth, with the kindest and jolliest disposition. A friendship between Jonathan Davis and Elizabeth Bowen in their childhood days was destined to bring the two together again. In 1695 or thereabouts he journeyed from his Long Island home to Greenwich and Cohamsey in West Jersey, and there visited the host of friends that he had known back in old Swansen. But the lone star that drew him, more than his love for the friends here, was his boyhood sweetheart, Elizabeth Bowen.

The place where the Bowens had settled took the name of Trenton. Here is a little log church which the company built on their arrival and their people assembled on the Seventh Day Sabbath. Timothy Brooks, their leader in the migration to this new land, now became their spiritual leader, and preached to them on the Sabbath Day. It is here that the congregation assembled on the wedding of Jonathan and Elizabeth, at the little church by the roadside, sheltered by the forest primeval, to hear the words that should unite them one. The minister of the occasion was Hannah Bowen's husband, the worthy Rev. Timothy Brooks.

Jonathan Davis did not go back to Long Island, but located not far from Trenton where he and his brother Elkanah Davis, had farms. Elkanah Davis was noted as the Surveyor General of New Jersey. Jonathan and Elizabeth Davis were a childless couple, but the brother Elkanah Davis names a son Jonathan, and the name has been handed down through his nephew.

AYARS FOUNDS SHELTER FOR THE SEVENTH-DAY-KEEPERS.

Once more, in 1705, Robert Ayars and Master, his wife, determined to be of help to his wife's relatives and his own friends, whom he had been instrumental in locating in Cohamsey Country. Always true to his convictions that the Seventh Day was the Sabbath, appointed to be kept holy by divine command, he wished to live near those of his faith and to help their cause. Therefore, according to the records in the State House at Trenton he purchased for "the sum of two hundred and forty pounds at Trenton he purchased for the sum of two hundred and forty pounds current money of New Jersey, Two Thousand Two hundred acres of land, and all and every the Lands, Isles, Islands, Mines, Minerals, Woods, His burges, dwelling, husbanding, hunting and all other Royalties, Franchises, Harbours, profits, commodities, hereditaments and Appurtenances whatsoever thereto Belonging."

The Passing of Rev. Timothy Brooks.

This splendid tract of land included Cohamsey Corners, now Shiloh, where he encouraged his friends to locate. The early settlers had maintained two separate church societies and two meeting houses from the time of their arrival. The friends of Rev. Timothy Brooks met on the Seventh day in one, and Rev. Thomas Miller, worth of Salem was pastor of the other congregation. The latter in early times was known as the First Day Baptist Church of Cohamsey, now called the First Baptist Church of Cohamsey. The author, of Timothy Brooks of Massachusetts says, "We are told that Rev. Timothy Brooks was not eminent for parts of learning, yet he was successful as a preacher; weak in carriage; of sweet and loving temper, and always came to conviction, and made the Shiloh ministers instruct him in the word of the Lord more perfectly. The two Seventh Day congregations grew and formed a separate society until 1710 for its members would not lay aside their differences with others as to predestination, the singing of the Psalms, the laying on of hands and a few other minor details of doctrine. At the same time, due to the death of Pastor Killingsworth, Mr. Brooks was asked to become the pastor of the Cohamsey Church. He accepted and remained the pastor until his death in 1715, having won the love of both flocks.

It is interesting to note that two of Timothy Brooks' daughters remained true to their Seventh Day doctrine and were, among others, organizers of the Seventh Day Baptist Church at Shiloh where a great many of their descendants still worship."

Our three heroines were wholly consecrated to the keeping of the Sabbath, and since Hannah's husband had changed to keep the first day, Elizabeth's husband who was living near Trenton went valiantly to work to try to hold the scattering members of their faith together.

Jonathan Davis' father, the senior Jonathan Davis, had been a minister of the Seventh Day Baptist faith in Long Island. So the son, ever since his marriage to Elizabeth Bown in 1695, had been preaching to the brethren at Hopewell in old Hunterdon county and to those at Cohamsey.

When the Hopewell congregation at Cohamsey became pastorless his visits became more frequent. As the members drifted toward Cohamsey Corners (Shiloh) and abandoned the old meeting house, a reorganization was brought about. This happened in 1716, the year after Rev. Timothy Brooks' death.

THE PASSING OF ROBERT AYARS

Men and women live in the works which they do. This narrative started out to tell of three girls. So now the husband of one of them has gone; but his works; they follow him. What a noble thing, his leading that company of men and women out of a land of trouble and oppression to happy homes in a new country; and after that, being their spiritual advisor until the end of his days! Only four years later, the husband of another of the three passes on; this time Robert Ayars, who died in 1719. What a life of service to his friends!

How very, very much did those early settlers owe him for finding them a "promised land." And what a debt their descendants owe this man for the blessings that have come down to them!

SHILOH CHURCH ORGANIZED 1737

So these two men were gone, but the things they labored for remained, and Jonathan and Elizabeth were left to carry on their work.

That work was Christian work among these brethren. On the surface all was quiet; but really, something was due to happen; and that, the new organization of a real live church in Shiloh. This happened March 27, 1737. On April 4, 1739 (March 24, 1738 old style) Caleb Ayars sr. a son of Robert Ayars, deeded the society an acre of land for a meeting house and burial ground. A nephew Elder Jonathan Davis, Elizabeth Bown's husband, was called for the pastor. He was Rev. Jonathan Davis so named for his uncle. The members went to work the same year that they received the land and built a church upon it. That was in 1739.

The original acre is the northeast corner of the present cemetery, and the exact location of the house may be known from the fact that Rev. Jonathan Davis, the first regular pastor, was buried under the meeting house floor, between the centre of the room where stood a stove, and the pulpit. A flat marble slab marks his resting place.

A paragraph on the Jonathan Davises might not be amiss here.

The first Jonathan Davis of this account was one of three brothers who came to America from Dorsetshire, Mass., in 1649, and with them located at Swansea in the Massachusetts colony. He later removed to Long Island with his family, where he was a Seventh Day Baptist minister. His son, Elder Jonathan Davis, lived at Trenton, N.J., and is known as the "father of the Seventh Day Baptist Church at Shiloh, N.J." A grandson of the first Jonathan Davis was a minister in Long Island, and son of Jonathan Davis, Surveyor General, was the third of the name - Rev. Jonathan Davis, first pastor of the Shiloh Church. The next pastor, son of Rev. David Davis, of the Welsh Tract Church of New Castle, Delaware.

THE OLD BRICK CHURCH AT SHILOH

It was during the ministry of the last named Jonathan Davis that a new brick church was built; and it was during the same year, 1771, that the old frame meeting house was removed and Shiloh got its name.

They had moved the old church from its place in the cemetery, and at evening it stood at the "forks". As they decided to leave it there for the night Rev. Jonathan Davis asserted, "The ark of the covenant rests at Shiloh." The name caught the fancy of his hearers and in time became general.

THE PASSING OF ELDER JONATHAN DAVIS

As Elizabeth Bowen was the last of our three heroines to be introduced the curtain shall fall last upon her. No children, but she led a useful life with her husband who strived so hard to keep his brethren at Rowantown and Cohamsey Corners united in Christian living.

At the State House at Trenton is the will of Elder Jonathan Davis.

It was written at Trenton, March 31, 1746, N.E. and he died in April of the same year. His will was proved April 26, 1746, new style.

Rev. Morgan Edwards, the historian, writing of the Shiloh Church in 1790 said "He died in Trenton about 1750."

This error has been handed down in the later writings about this man.

Edwards also wrote, "His wife was Elizabeth Bowen, but no issue.

He was very tall and fat, which made his familiars hunker under the name of the Great High Priest."

His will states, "I give and bequeath all my estate both real and personal whatsoever and whosoever ever to my well beloved wife Elizabeth Davis," and further, "I give and bequeath unto my brother Lincolnton Davis' five sons, to wit, Wm. Nathan, Jonathan, Nathan, Samuel and John the sum of five pounds proclamation money to be equally divided among them. I give and bequeath unto my said brother's son Alnathan my ivory headed cane.

Item, I give and bequeath unto my brother's son Jonathan my folio concordance set out by Clement Cotton."

The inventory includes a large Bible. It would be interesting to know if any of these things still exist. How long Elizabeth survived her husband, and where they are buried can never be known. But their work lives after them.

ROBERT BONHAM

The following copied from minutes taken at the General Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the year 1800.

ROBERT BONHAM; he was a son of Hezekiah Bonham, who was early a member of the First Methodist society in the western part of Maryland, at Pipe-Creek, and a local preacher.

The probability is, that Robert was a native of Virginia, as his father removed from Maryland to Virginia, and lived in Fredrick county, in that state. He was a young man of an amiable gracious heart and upright walk, lively in his ministry, and active in duty.

He began to travel in 1794, and was stationed in Huntington; in 1795, in Bath circuit, in Virginia; in 1796, in Hartford and Caroline; in 1797 in Queen-Ann's, a supernumerary; in 1798, in Talbot a supernumerary; 1799 in Strasburg, a supernumerary.

He was lingering out his life for three years, with consumption; but appeared to be a man of great animal life, under his weight of affliction; at the general conference, he was, by his own account, comfortable and had confidence in God. He died in the month of June (1800) at Baltimore, and no doubt rests in Abraham's bosom, where affliction and pain are no more.

Robert Bonham was a son of Hezekiah Bonham and Mary Bonham. page 187 in BONHAM book.

CORNERED ON A CROW OF TOBACCO

Ed. P. Bonham, who several years ago was a Lamar county Commissioner, and a good one, recently had business in Austin and Houston.

While in Austin Mr. Bonham heard a story out of the corner and it is interesting. It concerned his Uncle, Samuel Bonham (p 59) who was for years a State surveyor. He lived in Grayson county, and was county surveyor there before going to Austin and into service of the State.

Ed called at the land office and there met one of the employees who had been in that service for 40 years. The name "Bonham" recalled the story of this old-time employe, who had worked for about ten years with Sam Bonham, and he told Ed. the story. He said;

"The old method of making original surveys of land was for the surveyor and his group of assistants to travel on horses with a chuck wagon, for they worked away out in the unsettled country and returned to town only when their food supply was exhausted.

When surveying land it was customary to record the location of a corner of a section of land by noting in the surveyors field notes a near-by tree or boulder, or other natural mark that would assist in determining the location of the section.

In the group headed by Samuel Bonham, on one of these surveying expeditions, was a man noted for chewing tobacco in large quids.

On one occasion they were surveying in an area where there were no natural objects to use as markers, and a stake was driven to mark the beginning of the section, its first corner.

The big tobacco chewer pulled up the stake and spat into the hole a huge quid of tobacco he had chewed, and replaced the stake.

After completing the survey of that section, which ended at the stake covering the tobacco, and finding no tree or other natural object on the prairie section, Samuel Bonham wrote in his field notes the location of the section with notation 'Cornered on a crow of tobacco.'

OBITUARY OF COLONEL JOHN BONHAM

BRAVE DEEDS IN THE REVOLT.

COLONEL JOHN BONHAM, C.B., late Royal Artillery, formerly of the Artillery, a survivor of the defence of Lucknow, who died Friday at Ballintaggart, Co. Wick, in his 84th year, was, we believe, the only remaining British Veteran, whose intrepid services in circumstances of imminent peril are the subject of detailed record in the pages of Halliwell, and other historians of the Sepoy Revolt.

Halliwell was confident that had Sir Henry Lawrence lived, instead of being killed by a shell which penetrated a room where he was seated soon after the investment of the Residency, his recommendation would have led to Bonham's receiving the Victoria Cross.

When the King and Queen were touring in India, as Prince and Princess of Wales in 1905-6, Colonel Bonham headed the small band of Veterans of the siege of Lucknow, who were assembled to meet their Majesties, and he had the honor of describing from personal recollection the moving events of 1857.

The Queen suggested that he write his experiences, but fulfillment of the proposal rather the publication of the material, which Bonham already had on hand, was delayed until the present month, when he was in his 84th year, and had enjoyed for a short time, the proud position of Father of the Indian Army.

His footnote to History entitled "Ours to 1857" was reviewed in the Times Literary Supplement of last Thursday. (date not given)

John Bonham was born July, 1834, to the Rev. John Bonham, J.P. of Ballintaggart, Co. Wick, and Barbara, third daughter of Mr. John Morris, Maghera, the estate of which afterwards passed into the possession of Lord Rossmore.

Bonham entered the Military Seminary of the East India Co., at Addiscombe in 1851, and was commissioned to the Bengal Artillery at the end of the following year.

He was in command of a Horse Battery of the Oudh Irregular Force, at the Trans-Gogra Station of Secroora, about 50 miles from Lucknow when the Mutiny broke out.

There were also at Secroora the 2nd Oudh Infantry and the 1st. of the Oudh Irregular Cavalry.

The ladies and the children of the station were conveyed to Lucknow, on June 9th, after news had been received of the revolt of the troops at Faisabad. Greatest excitement prevailed in the Sepoy Lines (native Indians employed as soldiers by the British Service in India), and the officers of Infantry feeling that all was lost, early on the morning of June 10th., mounted horse and rode straight to Ballintaggart to join the British forces there. Lieut. Bonham refused to accompany them.

He believed his men, ever when, he possessed great influence, and he was confident they would stand by him in the case of attack.

The only men of British race with him were two farriers (blacksmiths or horse-shoers) sergeants, and a Quartermaster-sergeant of the 2nd. Oudh Infantry.

He went down to the Infantry Lines, and his persuasions led the troops to promise to march into Lucknow under his command. But unfortunately these professions of loyalty were short lived. The Residency was plundered, and the Infantry marched up to the battery to take the gun. Bonham ordered his men to fire upon them, but the order was disobeyed, the 1st. and some of the best of the men were ordered to leave his line, and he was left to himself; they brought all the guns and muzzles, and would not to pursue a certain road, which they knew to be occupied by the rebels.

Forced to leave and see his guns fall into the hands of the mutineers, Bonham started with a heavy heart, accompanied by his three sergeants, crossed the Gogra by an unfrequented ferry, and reached Lucknow the next day.

On June 29th., Lawrence who had been engaged in strengthening, and provisioning the Residency, was informed that a large rebel army, encouraged by the fall of Cawnpore, had collected near the village of Chinhat, about 7 miles to the northeast, with the object of advancing to the capture of Lucknow.

He resolved to march out to attack the following morning taking a Howitzer (a short barreled cannon used for throwing shells), and two Field Pieces. The enemy gained on our left flank, and the small British Force had no alternative but to retreat.

The enemy galloped their guns on either flank of our forces and continued to pound it with grape all the way to the Nekrail Bridge, some four miles from Lucknow. As the retiring force approached the bridge, a large body of the rebel cavalry was immediately in the line of retreat, the enemy's infantry was also pressing on and our ammunition was exhausted. A little squadron of volunteers hurled themselves upon the dense mass of mutineers in front, and secured possession of the bridge.

Lawrence placed the guns on the bridge, and ordered the port fires to be lighted. The feat had all the hoped-for effect. The enemy shrank back from the bridge, apparently defended by loaded guns; and the small force succeeded in gaining the shelter of the city, and reaching the Residency.

Their losses had been most severe, and they had left their guns behind them. The heroic efforts made by Bonham to save the Howitzer, Mallison, wrote in his history, "Would most assuredly, had Sir Henry Lawrence lived, have gained for the officer the Victoria Cross."

The complete investment of the Residency began the next day, when it had some 3,000 inmates (including 800 women and children, and 700 non-combatant Indians) reduced to about 1,000 when the first relief was effected. Bonham's regret that he just failed to save the Howitzer at the bridge, was intensified by the fact that on July 2nd, Sir Henry Lawrence was mortally wounded by a shell fired by the Howitzer.

In his report on the defence of Lucknow, dated Sept. 25, 1857, after the first relief, Brigadier Inglis mentioned Bonham as having rendered "the most effectual assistance", and expresses regret that he was deprived of his services early in the siege, as he was wounded no fewer than three times. Bonham received the Brevet of Major, and the medal with clasp, and was granted one years service, in common with all combatant survivors of Lucknow. He reached the rank of Honorary Colonel in 1872, retired in 1874, and was created C.B. in 1906, nearly 50 years after his gallant contribution to the suppression of the Mutiny.

At his Irish home he was Justice of the Peace, and maintained good health, into his nonagenarian years, retaining his vivid recollection of his Mutiny experience.

He married in 1870, his cousin Mary, a second daughter of Mr. Phillip Wroughton, of Woolley Park, Berks, by his marriage to Blanche fifth daughter of Mr. John Harris, of Hughenden, and had two sons, and a daughter, Mrs. Bonham died in 1901.

Many doing research on their family lines have found it from difficult to impossible to find records of the marriages of some of their ancestors, especially in Virginia and North Carolina.

The same experience in trying to locate records of births and deaths.

In Virginia and North Carolina the Church of England was in power before the revolution, and the ministers were the only ones who could perform marriages.

Those who wished to marry could either have their "banns" published, which was the announcing the coming marriage for three consecutive Sundays in the Church service, or by securing a marriage license from the county clerk in the county where the intended bride resided and furnish a bond of 50 pounds to guarantee that there was no legal cause to prevent the marriage.

It was not always convenient or possible for the poor boy and girl to furnish a bond for $250, so the poorer classes were married by "banns" and the wealthy displayed their wealth by furnishing a bond and buying a license.

The ministers of the Church charged what seemed to some to be an excessive fee for performing the ceremony. The ministers then (if they remembered to do so) recorded the marriage in the parish register.

Many of the poorer people did not approve of the Church practice and as a result there were many men and wives who were honorable, God fearing people who had never been married according to the law, and the ministers often recorded their children as "bastards".

Prior to 1740 it was not unlawful for anyone other than the church to perform marriage ceremonies.

In the remote back country it was common practice for the families of a boy and girl wanting to be married to make a marriage agreement in the presence of the two families, and then be considered man and wife, until the first circuit rider (traveling preacher) passed their way, at which time a regular marriage ceremony was performed.

These preachers were supposed to turn a record of marriages performed by them in to the county clerk to be recorded.

At the best, this was handled in a haphazard manner as some turned in their records when they "got around to it."

I have seen some of these original records turned in and some were for a one month period and some for a year or more, and on all kinds of paper, scraps or whatever was at hand.

Some of the writing was so poor that it was almost impossible to make out the names.

These original reports were supposed to have been entered in a marriage record book in the county clerk's office, but many were never entered. I personally have checked some of these original records against the book records and found they were not entered.

This situation created conditions that at first glance might be embarrassing where the marriage record is located and find that the first child (maybe your ancestor) was born before the recorded marriage, or very soon after.

Some of the original records (lost) turned in by the traveling preachers did not even have the date of the marriage, just the date of receipt.

Some of the reports read, "I have married the following; John Smith and Jane Doe."

Practically none of the originals I examined made any note of where the marriage was performed, or the date of the service.

In many states, for many years it was not necessary (by law) to register births. In the birth record book of the county in Iowa where I was born in 1886, there are 52 lines to the page, and for the year 1888-89 the page is less than half full. To be so sure likely that the registered births were not more than one tenth of the actual births.

A great deal of dependence was placed in the records in the family bible, and for a few years that was good enough.

In my research how many times have I been told "when our house burned down we lost all our family records" "we do not know what ever because of the old family bible, it had a complete record in it" "mother had a written record of the births of all the children but I don't know what ever happened to it".

Another thing that has caused confusion in family research is that most of the information has had to be gathered by correspondence, and when letters of inquiry were sent to county clerks or other officials the results were many times not very satisfactory or downright incorrect.

A researcher on my Bonham line once wrote to the county clerk in the county in Virginia where my great-grandfather and great-grandmother were married, and asked for information as to whether there was a record of the marriage, and the reply said there was no record.

When I visited the same county several years ago, the same county clerk, then quite an old man but still in office, was in charge.

He was very courteous to me and we located the record of the marriage.

When I spoke to him about the letter he said he always turned such inquiries over to some of the help and all he did was sign the letter.

Many town and county clerks are not interested in genealogy, so any search they make is likely to be incomplete and unsatisfactory.

One county clerk I had written to in Virginia would not reply even when a self addressed envelope was enclosed.

My question being one that could be answered with yes or no, I sent a self addressed post card with yes and no on it and asked him to check it and return. The card was never returned.

As a contrast to the clerk mentioned, another one in Oregon sent me a complete list of all Bonham births, deaths and marriages in their records, and closed with "if I can be of any further help etc".

As a whole my experience with public officials in such cases has been pleasing and satisfactory.

An experience in Alabama well illustrates; For a long time I had been puzzled and had made no headway in the search for information on a Simeon Bonham, and was under the impression that he had a large family. When I visited the county seat where he had lived, and where his will was filed, and asked the Probate Judge for information, one would have thought from the way he acted that he had a great stake in the matter.

After giving me a great deal of information on the Bonhams, as they pronounced it down there, he said "go out on a certain road so many miles to a little store and tell Mr. ____ I sent you and I want him to take you out to the old Simeon Bonham place."

I followed his instructions but the man was not in the store, but his wife gave me directions on how to get to the Stick Williams place which is the old Bonham place.

It was here that I heard a new direction when the road turn left on the black-top road etc, and when I asked her how far to the black-top road she said "just a look", and sure enough when I got into my car and out onto the highway I could see the black-top road to the left.

It was a new expression to me, I had heard "just by a place" and "just a holler away" and many others, but never "just a look".

Another term they have down there is for what we call district, such as a political district, down there is called a "tent".

The section in which the Bonham place was located was called the Bonham "tent".

On the site (as he was called) Bonham place I found a colored family who had lived there for fifty years, and when I asked for location of the graveyard she pointed to it, (I expected to find a cemetery) and when she saw I was not clear as to where it was she went out with me and showed me the gravestones of Simeon Bonham and his son.

The upper portion of the Simeon gravestone was broken off and there was no name showing, just the date of death.

When I asked if she was sure it was Simeon Bonham's grave she said "I say, it!" "I don't seen that name there too many times to not be sure".

I asked how the stone got broken off and she said "one time my son and my no-account brother-in-law was working out near and the brother-in-law took a swipe at the gravestone with an axe and broke off the top."

She said the pieces had laid there for a long time but were gone now, as that had happened years ago, but "I know it is Simeon Bonham's grave."

The stone next to it was too weathered to make out so she sent her daughter to the house to "git a scrubbing, soap and water" and with that and a stick of wood we washed off the stone until all the letters and dates were clearly visible. It was the stone of Simeon's son who had died in the same year 1835.

When I gave the colored lady a half-dollar for her trouble she grinned from ear to ear, and thanked me profusely.

Simeon Bonham's will showed he had just the one son and three daughters, so there were no descendants by name.

So folks searching for records of deaths must remember that it was common practice to bury the dead on the family place, "down by the bluff" "under the big apple tree" etc. so it is difficult to confirm death dates.

Even in cemeteries where gravestones were used in time they became weather beaten and inscriptions have disappeared entirely.

In an old cemetery in Piscataway, N.J. many of the stones were absolutely blank, and only the church records gave the information desired, but such records are seldom available.

Prior to 1800 the stone commonly used was a soft, dark slate, which weathered easily and quickly and had a tendency to split off.

Later a grayish-blue slate was used, it being harder stone than the dark slate, and took a better polish.

Years ago there were many more private cemeteries than there are now.

While trying to locate the burial place of Smith Bonham, brother of my great-grandfather David, in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, I went to the county offices to see if they had a map showing the cemeteries in the county, and sure enough they did, showing both public and private cemeteries of record. As I recall there were about 150 cemeteries in that one county.

How multiply that by the number of counties in Ohio, and see what a task one would have in locating the grave of an ancestor who "died in Ohio".

As religious as the Puritans are supposed to have been, they considered marriage not as a religious sacrament, but as a civil contract.

Marriages were performed by a magistrate and at one time ministers were "forbidden" to perform a marriage.

Although you will find baptisms and burials recorded in the books of the old churches, especially in New England, you will not find the early marriages entered there.

Church records, unlike law records, are not always easy to locate.

They are usually kept by the minister himself, or by the church clerk.

In one California town I had been told that the church had records that I was interested in, so I called on the priest and told him what I wanted. It was easy to determine that I was not of his faith and I was brusquely turned away, even when I offered a contribution for the information. I never did get the information I sought.

It was on the research on my wife's family line, the Greens, who had long been members of that church. It was just the act of an individual.

A contrast to that experience was, after I had written to a California mission requesting information on a Green marriage, and enclosing $2, quite some time went around no reply.

Later I visited the mission and was ushered into a small office of the priest, and so asked my mission.

I told him of my letter of inquiry and the $2 enclosed and said that possibly it was not enough, to which he replied "it was ample and double the usual amount."

He had on a metal brace back of his neck and down his back, and explained that quite some time before he had fallen and injured his back, and that it was only in the last couple weeks that he had been able to get to his desk, which was piled high with mail.

He said he had not been able to answer any of the letters but with a chuckle he said "but you bet I was able to open them and take out the money".

Then he made a thorough search of the records, some of them very old bound in leather, and written in Latin and Spanish.

"He said, they were not married here". When I told him an aunt of my wife said she and her brother had been there and seen the records, he said "they were mistaken, that marriage was not performed here."

He was very sincere and then told me that if they were married during the rainy season that it was likely they could not get across the river and had been married at the "little church in the Valley" on the other side of the river.

When I told the priest there what I wanted and the date, he opened his record and there it was on the first page.

He furnished a certified copy of the marriage certificate and I was on my way in about ten minutes.

Which goes to prove that everything you are told is not true.

Another thing that has caused confusion to family researchers is the different ways in which the surnames is found to have been spelled.

In "Searching for your ancestors" by Gilbert Jones, he states; "in the first federal census, of 1790, the surname Reynolds was found to have been spelt in thirty-four different ways."

Also the term "cousin" and "brother" have caused confusion, as the term cousin might have been used to apply to any relative other than the immediate family, and the term "brother" could well mean a member of the same church.

Possibly the greatest problem of the family researcher is trying to get information by mail, and my experience is that about 30% of the folks will not answer even when a self addressed and stamped envelope is enclosed.

For several years up to 1957 we made trips every summer of from 10,000 to 17,000 miles, visiting all parts of the country, interviewing donors, searching in courthouses, cemeteries, libraries and other places where information could be found.

In every state where I visited a person who had not replied to my letter sons( and I burn letters, as I did not stir with one letter), - and greeted courteously and with smiles for all who called, and lost every case they were willing to go out of their way to help get family data.

Yet I see some folks would say "I did not know just what you wanted" "we did not know what you were up to" "I have been getting information together" "why are you interested in Bonhams" and such other reasons for not having answered.

To sight a recent experience "In 1950 while on a trip I called on a family and asked about the mother who lived quite a distance away, and was assured that if I wrote to the mother and asked questions about the family that she would give me the family data desired."

After my return home I wrote to the mother (in 1950) and as no reply was received, so I wrote again.

Just a short time ago(1961) I received a letter from this mother with a complete record of her family and as much of the elder Bonhams as she knew. In the letter she asked some questions and asked for "prompt reply."

Another lady waited nearly two years to reply to my letter of inquiry, and then sent her letter air-mail. Some ever a year has passed and she has not answered my last letter which was in reply to hers.

However I have had some very wonderful correspondents who have gone out of their way to get records together for me.

No doubt my experiences are typical of what has happened to others.

Researchers learn quickly that local legends and traditions cannot be accepted-or rejected- without investigation.

Some are based on misinformation or false assumptions. But others even though they run directly contrary to written history, prove exactly correct.

In North Carolina, where the Bonhams had very little information on their early ancestors, there were two legends that have proven to be absolutely correct.

One was that "two of the early Bonham ministers were ordained by Bishop Asbury".

Reverend Bonham, an ancestor to the North Carolina Bonhams mentioned, was "licensed to exhort" by Bishop Asbury.

Reverend Bonham, son of Reverend, was "ordained" by Bishop Asbury so that legend was correct though the folks telling of it had no idea as to who the two Bonhams were, who were "ordained".

The other legend was that in their line there were five Bonhams, and that is correct though no one there could tell who all of the five were, nevertheless the legend is correct.

Another legend is of the Samuel(4) Bonham line, and it is that:

"My grandfather Samuel was raised in England, married a French lady, and settled in Virginia."

True in principal but wrong details.

In all the reports it has always been "grandfather" where as it ranged great-grandfather to great-great-grandfather.

Maybe in the early times did not use the word, hence the confusion such as the use of "cousin".

Like the story of the man who "fought with Guster" the conclusion would naturally be that he was with Guster in the last stand.

The fact was he had fought with Guster in other engagements, but not the last stand. Not correct, a long time since.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Compiled by
Archer A. Adams

Company of people in England disturbed by political and religious oppression, escaped to Holland, where they lived 12 years; first at Amsterdam, then at Leyden. Becoming interested in the new world across the Atlantic they secured patent from the Virginia Company.

July 1620 found them at Southampton, England, ready to embark in two vessels, the Speedwell, and the Mayflower. Sailing early in August, they soon found the Speedwell was not seaworthy, and on August 21st they were forced to return to land.

Taking a few of the passengers from the Speedwell, the Mayflower again sailed, on September 6th, with 101 passengers. They were intending to go to the Hudson River, then under the control of Holland.

Due to severe storms, they were forced to land on what is now known as Cape Cod, on November 11, 1620.

Before landing they drew up a compact as a guide and rule in their government in the new world. There were 41 signers of this compact; that is, 41 heads of families. Among the signers were Edward and Samuel Fuller, brothers.

First exploration of the land was led by Miles Standish. His expedition returned with corn the Indians had stored in covered pits. They intended to pay for the corn when they could get in touch with the Indians, which they eventually did. This corn helped tide them over the severe winter that followed.

Half the company died that first winter, due to the lack of food and proper shelter; in fact so many died that no record was kept, meaning that today it is not known where they were buried.

Among those who died were Edward Fuller and his wife. They left a young son, Samuel, who was taken into the home of his uncle, Samuel Fuller, who is reputed to have been a doctor. Another son of Edward Fuller, Nathaniel, came over a year or two later.

Edward Fuller was born Sept. 4, 1575, in the parish of Redenhall, County of Norfolk, England; dying at Plymouth in the winter of 1632/31.

Other members of the Fuller family came over a little later.

These, with others, under the leadership of the Rev. John Lathrop, formed a settlement of Scituate.

Around 1637, the Rev. John Lathrop, (who had come from England in the ship Griffin in 1634) obtained a grant from the Plymouth Colony, and established a new colony at Barnstable, moving there in 1639.

The land was surveyed and the lots assigned under the guidance of Capt. Miles Standish and John Alden. There were about 25 families, mostly from Scituate, who moved to Barnstable. Nearby settlements were at Sandwich and Yarmouth.

In the next few years many Quakers came over from England (to escape the persecution then under way) and became established in these towns.

Afterward the governor of the province started persecution of the Quakers. Under compulsion, the Plymouth colonies also passed repressive measures, and severe penalties were exacted of any who sided with the Quakers. There was general dissatisfaction with these repressive measures, and even at great danger to themselves, there was strong effort made to protect the Quakers. By 1633 it is recorded that 10 families at Sandwich had joined the Quakers, and the residents of other towns of and Barnstable were distinctly in sympathy with the Quakers.

Owing to this situation, some of the people later moved to other colonies.

SAMUEL FULLER

Among those who moved from Scituate to Barnstable with the Rev. John Lathrop, was Samuel Fuller. This Samuel Fuller had come over to Plymouth with his father Edward Fuller. In 1635 he married Jane Lathrop, daughter of the Rev. John Lathrop. At his death in 1635, Samuel Fuller in his will named two sons and four daughters. The two sons Samuel and John were willed certain lands. But his four daughters (Elizabeth Taylor, Hannah Bonham, Mary Williams, Sarah Crowe) he specified that each should have four pounds (money) and two cows, and that all household stuff be equally divided amongst the four.

His daughter, Hannah, had married Nicholas Bonham, on January 1, 1639.

There is no previous record of Nicholas Bonham, but historians surmise he was a brother of George Bonham, who came over in 1635.

GEORGE BONHAM

George Bonham, was born 1604, came from Townsend, England, in 1635, in the barque Phillip. He settled in Plymouth. In 1644 he married Sarah daughter of George Norton. They had three daughters, Ruth, Sarah, Patience, and one son George.

The son George married Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Jenney. They had six daughters and two sons, as shown; Samuel 1636--Ruth 1636--Elizabeth 1639--Ann 1690--Sarah 1693--Lydia 1696--Ebeneszer 1699--Suzanne 1700.

The father and son George owned various pieces of property at Plymouth the last transaction of record is dated 1721. In 1694 the son George created a felling mill on a brook running through the property.

No further record of this family; leaving open the question whether they moved to one of the other colonies. The name Bonham does not appear on the records of the Federal census of 1792.

BARNSTABLE, MASS.

In 1662 the town fathers of Barnstable voted to admit into full membership, that is, as legally admitted inhabitants, with full rights to use of the commons, all their sons (and others) 24 years of age, or married. At that time 20 young men were admitted. Among them were Samuel Fuller, Samuel Fuller Jr. (presumably son of Mr. Samuel Fuller) and Nicholas Bonham.

The total number of voting inhabitants at that time was 100. Nicholas Bonham was given as having two daughters: Sarah born 1663, and Mary born 1661.

Census of 1670 does not show the name of Nicholas Bonham living in Barnstable.

PISCATAWAY, NEW JERSEY

The Dutch surrendered to the English their holdings in New Amsterdam in 1664. The year 1666 was notable not only in the history of the colony (around Elizabethtown) but of the state. The "concessions and agreement" having been published in New England and receiving the attention of members of the Congregational Churches in Milford, Guilford, Brantford, and New Haven, a committee of these Puritans, led by Robert Treat, was sent to Gov. Cartaret to examine the advantages offered by the Lord Proprietors. Rejecting Burlington as a possible location, decision was made upon the present site of the town of Newark.

In 1666 the New Englanders with their families, their beloved pastor, their church records and communion service, their cannons and all their household goods, reached their destination.

In 1673 the Dutch again seized control. At that time the population of the various towns was given as "heads of families."

Elizabethtown 80, Newark 86, Woodbridge 54, Piscataway 43, Middletown 60, Shewesbury 63, with 12 Quakers.

Treaty of 1674 returned this territory to England.

Genealogical Magazine Vol. 1, p. 3. No 5, whole No. 11 says;

Influence of Puritan and New England elements in New Jersey;

New Englanders who settled in the Jerseys between 1665 and the outbreak of the revolutionary war--examination of the records shows an astonishing proportion of pioneer families who came from the east.

Piscataway was settled from the east. Such names as Gilman-Martin-Hull-Dunham-Godfrey-Lanning-Bonham-Strickland.

ANCESTRAL STOCK

The English speaking colonists of East Jersey, in the main, were of yeoman stock. Various motives underlay the action of the settlers.

The return of the House of Stewart, with the establishment of a dissolute court and the general popular reaction from the social, political and ecclesiastical severities of the Cromwellian movement, gave to the majority of the newcomers, sufficient cause for leaving England.

But one instance need be cited to show the distinctive Calvinistic type of the early East Jersey life. It is in the matter of personal nomenclature. To East Jersey the settler from New England and Old England, brought Christian names indicative of a Puritan and in some cases the Quaker ancestry. Among ancient deeds and wills are to be found some curiosities of "given names" which descendants have carried down to distant generations. Thus the family of Hipscomb, of Shrewsbury, in 1693, were living Freedom, Monckhouse, and Reston.

Jedekiah Allen, who lived in Laversick, had among his children, Experience, Ephraim, Judah, and Patience; while in 1656 in that portion of Monmouth county resided Exercise and Thomas Gales, daughters of Jacob.

Among the names of women, appear Sybil, Beulah, Faith Moritz, in 1691, and Safety Grover, the latter a daughter of James, of Middleton.

In 1667 there was Hope Leonfield, of Woodfield. In 1701 Susan wife of John Johnson, of Monmouth county, and Betheeh Mitchell, daughter of William, whose home in 1693 was in Newark.

Among the children of Thomas Thompson of Elizabeth, in 1673, were Aaron, Moses, and Jux. In 1669, Hopewell Hull was a settler in Wood-bridge. Dishturner Ward appears in Newark in 1696 and 1694 barefoot Brynson is alluded to as a son of Daniel.

An examination of Christian names throughout this period, shows the strong influence of Biblical nomenclatures.

NEW JERSEY HIGHWAYS.

In West Jersey, owing to the wide shallow streams, marshes and heavy forests, association among the towns was almost impossible except by water. The conditions demanded servicable watercraft. Following the development of this form of communication, came the construction of roads, mere trails indeed, following the wanderings of the Indian paths and along the line of least resistance.

In West Jersey, a road extending from the falls of the Delaware (Freemont) to Cross Wicks thence to Burlington, to Newton, to Salem, and later to Cohamsey bridge (Bridgeton). This no doubt is the same road that 75 years ago was maintained as a turnpike (toll road) and is today a well established auto road between Salem and Bridgeton.

At best these early roads were little more than paths, yet over these roads the members of the assembly and council, judges of the courts, and merchants passed. In the carrying of goods, both pack horses and the sturdy backs of the Indian, and of negro slaves, were employed.

By the opening of the Revolutionary War there were several systems of roads in New Jersey. One reached southward from Cooper's Ferry (Camden) to Gloucester, Woodbury, Haddon, Penn's Neck, Salem, Greenwich, Cohamsey, and thence to Maurice River to Cape May.

FOOD OF THE INDIAN (and as adopted by the white man.)

Surpser, or corn meal, was the staple of the natives. Mallow fat was used as butter. Besides the meat of wild animals, fish and fowl, there was much to be had from the soil. The wild cactus, or Indian fig, is to this day the index of old village sites. The orange colored squash, still grown throughout the lower reaches of the state, is of Indian origin.

Beans and pumpkin were dried for winter use. The beach plums and persimmons were gathered in season; hickory nuts, walnuts and chestnuts were stored away to avoid famine. Fruits such as huckleberries and strawberries gave variety to their fare.

While the Indians ate meat and fruit raw, yet there was a general practice of cooking meals. This was done over the open fire. Portions of meat were fastened on the end of a spit and fried in the flames.

Pots were made of clay for cooking flesh and vegetables.

These vessels were egg shaped with bases and were set in the sand and fire built around them.

Cakes were made of corn meal, ground up by means of the stone pestle and mortar. A fire was built on the top of stones and after they were made hot, the cakes were cooked away with a split broom and small leaves were wrapped in the green leaves of the sassafras, tulip, poplar, oak or chestnut, often mixed together with thorns, were placed on the hearth to cook. Mixed with these cases were dried berries, plums, or chestnut meal. Probably the most common dish was the bowl of soup or rust. This was corn meal, boiled in water, and served in wooden bowls.

Fish, meat and shell fish were dried and smoked for winter use. Squash were cut in strips and hung up to dry. Cows and pigs were charred and stored in the ground in large clay pots. Roots and tubers such as ground nut, Indian turnip, (Jack-in-the-pulpit) were gathered in the fall and buried.

WHITE MAN

Throughout both east and west Jersey, the food for everyone, masters and servants alike, was coarse and limited in variety. Many of the vegetables and fruits were either not raised, or only found on the tables of the rich. Salt meats, fish and meats, particularly pork, with fresh deer or bear. Plenty of rye bread and milk, beans, potatoes, turnips, carrots and cabbage were staple articles of diet. Butter was rare. As a luxury, some few families preserved apple and peaches in stone jugs; otherwise fruits and vegetables were enjoyed only in season.

The meals were frugal, the course at dinner being in the winter, ordinarily, first, porridge, a broth, with a few beans thrown in and seasoned; second, an Indian pudding, with sauce; and third, boiled pork or beef, with potatoes and pumpkin. Suppers and breakfasts were usually alike; milk, with toasted bread, hot in winter, with bread and cheese. Sunday dinner, spare ribs, a stew or roast beef, geese, chicken or turkey. There was plenty of fish.

HAIR OF DRESS

Prunella and bradder were a luxury not much indulged in for a long time; and when these were obtained, they lasted long, being transmitted from mother to daughter, through successive generations. The female generally, whether old or young, were content with a home made gown of flannel for winter use, and trappers for summer. The latter was without waist and gathered at the top. For occasional "dress", a calico or poplin was enjoyed, the sleeves short, reaching to the elbow, with perhaps muffs, sometimes fur lined. Long gloves were worn, secured by "tightens" above the elbow (made of horse hair).

Aprons were worn in ordinary dress, made of checked linen or cotton. On special occasions, white aprons of cotton, linen or muslin. Caps were seldom worn, except in fall dress, being worn chiefly by older women, and tied under the chin. The "round neck cap", leaving the ears exposed, was a fashionable article of dress. Both leather and breadcloth shoes with wooden heels, covered and pointed toes, turned up, were worn by females. Bells were also used.

The men, old and young, had one good coat and vest; small clothes and a pair of shoes, the latter being well made, lasted for life, and long reaching to the knee. For every day use in winter, a jacket and trousers to the knee, a shirt and vest and small clothes of one or more colors, with the jacket, were in use. These were made of home spun
